Loyal Foes Plot Havoc For Reserve

BY BILL McCARTHY

Nearly a dozen men met behind locked doors in Duncan last night and plotted the "destruction" of a Vancouver Island Canadian army reserve force.

Top brass of the group, which included ex-officers of the German, Polish, British and Canadian armed forces, pored over maps and battle plans.

In the end they were confident they could "wipe out" the 198th Battery of the 66th Light Anti-Aircraft Regiment defending the crest of Mount Sicker, this week end.

The men meeting in secret session were members of the Cowichan Commandos, a unique military organization in many ways.

The sole aim of the Commandos is to create havoc within the ranks of local reserve units during military schemes.

In this they have been singularly successful, having defeated various Vancouver Island reserve groups in all four encounters on the field of mock battle.

Led by ex-navy officer James Flynn, of Duncan, the Commandos' originator, the 32 members recruited from navy, realism to army exercises.

Started only last year with members recruited fro mnavy, army and air forces of several countries — only one of its unique features — the Commandos are in demand among local reserve units to act as the enemy during exercises.

Mr. Flynn says he started the force because he thought the reserve units in "dreadful shape." He attributed this to a lack of realism in mock battles, especially for cadets.

"Pretending trees are men doesn't teach much," he says.

Now organized and sanctioned, but not recognized by the government, the Commandos boast an efficient military system which includes an air force of two planes—owned by members.

With so many officers making up the group, arguments on strategy often proves a greater obstacle than the reserve army.

BROKEN RULES

An example of their unorthodox methods is their use of an ancient (1800's) military manual. They read what the book has to say on a situation and then do the opposite.

"And it usually works," claims Flynn, the good-natured commanding officer.

The Commandos have even pressed their wives into service, to operate radios and maintain headquarters during exercises.

Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, VC, honorary colonel of the Commandos, has dubbed the unit "Her Majesty's Loyal Communist Army." But General Pearkes says the group is rendering an invaluable service to the local reserve units.

Using blank ammunition and creeping through the night with blackened faces, the Commandos lend a frightening realism.

On one occasion they crept into a reserve army camp, stole the food supply and let the air out of truck tires before being discovered.

"We also got into their headquarters and swiped a case of beer," chuckles Flynn, adding: "The Commandos need some incentive, too."

This week they will attack the 198th Battery encamped on top of Mount Sicker. That was the reason for the secret meeting in Duncan last night.

They are confident they will "destroy" the 198th, but the methods they will use are "strictly military secrets."

"We have several special secret weapons for this operation," says Flynn.

Rhee Party Leads Vote

SEOUL (AP)—Liberal party candidates loyal to President Syngman Rhee won a bare majority of Seoul's 16 election districts in Thursday's National Assembly elections but continued to show strongly throughout South Korea as returns slowly mounted.

Crack in Rock Menaces Canal

An engineer examines a deep crack in the rock near the Panama Canal. The split, first discovered in 1938, has become increasingly large until it has assumed a dangerous width. The cracking rock in the hills could fall into the waterway and block transportation. Plans are being mapped to remove the menace.—(Central Press Canadian.)

Casualties Lifted Out of Dien Bien Phu

Evacuation of French Union wounded from Dien Bien Phu is continuing on a small scale, with the French still hoping Vietminh forces will allow enlargement and repair of the shell-pocked airstrip at the fallen fortress so that large transport planes can be used to speed things up. Meanwhile, helicopters like this one and light planes are working under difficulties to carry out the casualties.—(Central Press Canadian.)

Still Not Good Enough

Nine of 10 Russian Planes Could Be Stopped—Claxton

OTTAWA (CP)—Defense Minister Claxton said Thursday that nine out of 10 planes of a Russian force attacking North America would be destroyed by continental air defenses.

However, he added in the leadoff of a Commons debate on defense estimates, that percentage of kills was still not good enough, and that "no doubt additional steps will be taken from time to time" to strengthen continental defenses.

Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, VC, Progressive Conservative military critic, said he isn't sure North America has a warning system as effective as Mr. Claxton had indicated.

PITIFULLY SHORT

Canada was pitifully short of fighter squadrons for home defense while it continued to maintain an air division in Europe, he said.

M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, said the defense estimates — about $2,000,000,000 in the current fiscal year—are based on Second World War thinking. Equipment on order would be obsolete before it could be provided.

He suggested that six of the 12 RCAF squadrons in Europe and that at least one battalion of the three-battalion brigade in Korea be brought home.

Mr. Claxton said he doesn't believe there is going to be a general war in the near future. But the basic Soviet aims of imperialism and aggrandizement remained.

PROTECT BASES

The primary aim of continental defense was to protect the West's massive retaliatory weapon, the United States strategic bomber force.

But the existence of nuclear weapons did not preclude conventional weapons. In fact, it made them more necessary to cope with local wars where nuclear weapons could not be employed, he said.

Canada's interceptor force—radar, communications and jet fighters—would be in complete operation by this summer or early autumn, he said, and this defense system had reached the stage where a Russian bomber force attacking U.S. targets might be forced to choose a route other than over the Canadian Arctic.

RADAR OUTPOSTS

The McGill radar fence was being strung across Canada north of the existing radar network, he said, and Canada and the U.S. were considering additional means to give early warning.

Good Samaritan Arrives at Last

SEATTLE (UP)—Art Braaten, 48, was in hospital here last night after being found in a vacant lot where he had lain helpless for three days and had been refused aid by passers-by.

Braaten, suffering from severe arthritis, went to sleep in the sun in the lot Sunday. When he awoke, he could not move.

He said he repeatedly cried out for help Sunday night, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, but those who heard him refused him aid. He said a "couple of dozen" persons had passed him by during the three days.

Police were finally summoned last night by R. K. Johnson, Seattle, who heard the calls for help as he drove his car past the lot.

British-U.S. Rift Over Asia Widens

LONDON (Reuters)—Differences over Indo-China policy are widening into the most serious breach of recent times between Britain and the United States, diplomatic quarters said Thursday.

Differences of opinion on the need for immediate diplomatic and military intervention in Indo-China have been simmering for the last month, since Britain refused to undertake direct military intervention in Viet Nam shortly before the fall of Dien Bien Phu.

The differences over several issues:

- Whether there should be immediate action to set up a Southeast Asia defense pact, as the U.S. wishes, or whether this should wait until the outcome of the Geneva Far Eastern conference, as Britain wishes.
- Whether projected five-nation staff talks on Southeast Asia's future security from a military point of view should be connected with the proposed Southeast Asia treaty organization. The U.S. wants a link between the two sets of talks. Britain does not.
- The question of actual military intervention in the field, which Britain refused and which is again being discussed directly between France and the United States.

Informed quarters here said that the actual proposal for British military intervention in Indo-China was that Britain should make an air strike in Indo-China to be joined by the United States should this policy get congressional backing.

Chinese Ready To Talk

GENEVA (AP)—Backstage conversations between East and West Thursday raised some hope that the Communists were ready to talk business on an Indo-China peace.

The Reds were reported willing to proceed today with debate on a military armistice without pressing for recognition at Geneva of "resistance governments" of Laos and Cambodia.

French sources said Red Chinese Premier Chou En-lai made known his position in a private talk with British Foreign Secretary Eden.

Prospect of Rain Increases Threat In B.C. Flooding

The prospect of rain lends new menace to the flood picture in B.C.'s Interior.

Showers and thunderstorms are predicted for today for the entire Interior region.

"If the rain is at all heavy, it will be pretty bad," said Chief Engineer Neil McCallum of the public works department.

Besides adding its own volume to swollen creeks and rivers, rain would wash huge quantities of melting snow down from the mountainsides.

The Kootenay, the Columbia and the Fraser all were rising rapidly, but water levels were still below the danger mark at major centres.

At a dozen points in the Interior crews were cleaning up after flash floods in small streams cut highways and railroad tracks.

At Mile 91 north of Prince George the Hart Highway was washed out for 100 feet.

HIGHWAY FLOODED

In the south, near Moyie, traffic on the Southern Trans-Provincial Highway was still splashing through 10 inches of water from the spilling Moyie.

Farther south, Elmer Creek washed away 1,000 feet of roadbed between Curzon Junction and Kingsgate.

CPR gangs had repaired their lines after four washouts.

Near Revelstoke, where the Columbia leaped up two feet in 24 hours, a slide-flood combination knocked out 200 feet of main-line trackage Wednesday. Trains were running again yesterday.

The rail line was also cut in the Nicola Valley, where rising waters reportedly lapped at the outskirts of Merritt.

Between Cranbrook and Yahk the Moyie spilled over the CPR line in four spots.

Near Manning a railway bridge over the Similkameen knocked out Wednesday, was being replaced by a temporary fill. The river was down three to six inches.

On the 20,000-acre Creston flats, dike patrols kept a round the clock watch on the rampaging Kootenay. The river still was four feet below the danger point.

DIKES BURST

Downstream in Idaho, the Kootenay burst dikes on both sides of Bonner's Ferry and inundated 3,000 acres of farmland. The town itself was still dry, but most residents had evacuated.

At Kimberley, Mark Creek dropped slightly overnight as a result of cooler temperatures. Workers dumped tons of rock to reinforce the concrete ditch which carries the creek through the town, and engineers were watching the situation closely.

At Keremeos, a new dike was hastily thrown up along the Similkameen to replace the old one which was badly undercut by swift-flowing water.

A near-tragedy occurred at Penticton where a nine-year-old girl fell into the swollen Penticton Creek. She was rescued and revived.

SANDBAGS RUSHED

Flood-control officials rushed 100,000 more sandbags from Vancouver to a distribution centre at Nelson, and another shipment of 35,000 was being readied.

Nelson, Trail and Castlegar were reported to have "no major problems" as yet.

The government yesterday issued a special snow survey bulletin which said conditions had improved since May 1, and "there is still sufficient time to allow run-off to occur without any widespread flooding."

Replaces De Valera

John Costello Irish Premier

DUBLIN (AP) — Silver-haired John A. Costello, Ireland's prime minister from 1948 to 1951, displaced aged, nearly blind Eamon De Valera again Thursday night as the Irish Republic's chief of government.

Voters in Tuesday's general election gave undisputed control of the Dail Parliament to a coalition formed and kept together by Costello, a leading Dublin lawyer.

The final results gave the combined opposition a majority of 16.

The voters rejected a bid by De Valera, only surviving commandant of the 1916 Easter uprising against Britain, to obtain a majority for his Fianna Fail men of destiny party.

Freak Rain Helps Crops

For west Saanich farmers who have no reservoirs to tap, parched crops are still dusty.

But on the East Saanich side of the peninsula there was jubilation yesterday afternoon. A brief but considerable downpour relieved thirsty crops.

The freak rainfall, not unknown in other years, was welcomed by farmers. "Worth $5,000," one fruit grower said.

Sooke Logger Killed

A Sooke logger was killed instantly at 2.30 yesterday afternoon when crushed by a falling tree.

He was Claude Angus Henson, about 30, who was employed by the Elder Timber Products Ltd.

The dead man had been employed by the firm since March, 1952. He was working as a bucker yesterday when the falling tree skewed and crushed him.

Henson had a wife and two small children.

RCMP said an inquest will be held at Hayward's funeral chapel in Victoria at 10 a.m. Tuesday.

Students Riot in Subway

NEW YORK (AP) — High school boys and girls by the hundreds rioted in the subway Thursday, surging in waves through moving cars and smashing all before them. A porter in their path was beaten.

There was no apparent motive beyond sheer rowdyism.

Twenty-four boys and 19 girls were taken in for questioning by police. First reports had said police rounded up 100 youths.

Most of the students slithered out of the grasp of cops and vanished.

HEAVY DAMAGE

The young vandals smashed windows, ripped apart seats and hurled them from the trains, broke light bulbs and wrecked vending machines. They pulled emergency cords and helped open train doors to disrupt travel schedules.

The riots started after about 1,500 students from four big high schools massed in Van Cortlandt park in The Bronx. Police said they thought the gathering was for a picnic or athletic event.

In the morning and again in the afternoon, heavy rain sent the students fleeing for shelter to a nearby IRT west side subway station entrance.

Most of the youngsters behaved but several hundred ran wild through trains which are elevated in that section.

A subway porter, Conrad Ingram, 26, ran afoul of the mob and tried to stem the tide of wreckage.

"They beat me up and cursed me," he said afterwards.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

KAREN KADLER, who used to act with the York Theatre here, has made good in Hollywood. They call her a "starlet."

Karen was a piquant brunette, and she looked like herself. Now the hair stylists and the cosmetic engineers have made her into an assembly-line cutie exactly like all the others who emerge from the movie mill.

I saw a picture of her recently, and she resembled 10,000 other mass-produced Hollywood glamour girls.

When she acted here, comparatively few people went to see her. Now thousands of Island moviegoers will pay good money to gape at her image on the screen.

We're funny people here. We won't attend live theatre. But ship the actors and actresses south, process them and send them back in dehydrated form—reduced to celluloid and packed in tin cans—and we stampede the box office.

We Victorians are great admirers of the imported article.

A code of door and sidewalk manners cries out to be written by some social lawgiver.

First of all, such a code should break the deadlock of the Sidewalk Dodgers who meet one another head-on, then dodge to left and right simultaneously like a pair of hootchie-kootchy dancers, except that they wear clothes.

A pair of too-polite individuals can dodge back and forth like this for hours, perfectly synchronized, and never get past one another. The only solution is a rule that specifies which way two sidewalk dodgers are to peel off—just like the department of transport rules about aircraft.

The code might solve the problem of Long-Range Door Holding. Through mistaken chivalry, some men hold a door open when a woman is approaching from distances up to 100 yards. I have seen it happen. I have absent-mindedly done it myself, on occasion.

If the woman has good eyesight, she notices from afar that a man is holding the door open. And she feels a sense of obligation. She mustn't keep him waiting too long. At least, I gather that something of the sort goes through her mind.

Consequently, the poor creature breaks into a run, and arrives at the door with scarcely breath enough to say "Thank you."

It is a strange convention that impels a woman to sprint the length of a city block, perhaps straining her heart, and then thank the person who made her do it.

Here is another case: A man is approaching a door that opens away from him. As he is about to go through it, he sees a woman coming at him from the other side. He holds the door open for her. But because of the way the man and the door are built, she has to duck under his arm to get through, as though negotiating a midget archway.

According to the old book of rules, a man gets off a vehicle first and gives his hand to a lady. But the rules weren't made for buses. If a man gets out of a bus and offers his hand to a strange blonde, she will likely as not administer a stinging slap on the palm with her gloves, and walk on disdainfully.

Sherlock Holmes—Hound of the Baskervilles

BY
SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

(Published by arrangement with the estate of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. World rights reserved. Illustrations copyrighted, 1954, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Sir Henry Baskerville, whose family appears to be fatally haunted by a giant hound, is warned to stay away from the moor where his ancestral home stands, and the same day reports that one of his brand-new boots has vanished. Now he wants the whole story.

"Your request is a very reasonable one," Holmes answered. "Dr. Mortimer, I think you could not do better than to tell your story as you told it to us."

Thus encouraged, our scientific friend drew his papers from his pocket and presented the whole case as he had done upon the morning before. Sir Henry listened with the deepest attention.

"Well, I seem to have come into an inheritance with a vengeance," said he when the long narrative was finished. "Of course, I've heard of the hound ever since I was in the nursery. It's the pet story of the family, though I never thought of taking it seriously before. But as to my uncle's death—well, it all seems boiling up in my head, and I can't get it clear yet. You don't seem quite to have made up your mind whether it's a case for a policeman or a clergyman."

"Precisely."

"And now there's this affair of the letter to me at the hotel. I suppose that fits into its place."

"It seems to show that someone knows more than we do about what goes on upon the moor," said Dr. Mortimer.

"And also," said Holmes, "that someone is not ill-disposed towards you, since they warn you of danger."

"Do you mean danger from this family fiend or do you mean danger from human beings?"

"Well, that is what we have to find out."

"Whichever it is, my answer is fixed. There is no devil in hell, Mr. Holmes, and there is no man upon earth who can prevent me from going to the home of my own people, and you may take that to be my final answer." His dark brows knitted and his face flushed to a dusky red as he spoke. It was evident that the fiery temper of the Baskervilles was not extinct in this their last representative. "Meanwhile," said he, "I have hardly had time to think over all you have told me. I should like to have a quiet hour by myself to make up my mind. It's half-past eleven now and I am going back right away to my hotel. Suppose you and your friend, Dr. Watson, come around and lunch with us at two."

"Is that convenient to you, Watson?"

"Perfectly."

"Then you may expect us. Shall I have a cab called?"

"I'd prefer to walk, for this affair has flurried me rather."

"I'll join you in a walk, with pleasure," said Dr. Mortimer.

We heard the steps of our visitors descend the stair and the bang of the front door. In an instant Holmes had changed from the languid dreamer to the man of action.

"Your hat and boots, Watson, quick! Not a moment to lose!" We hurried together down the stairs and into the street. Dr. Mortimer and Baskerville were still visible about two hundred yards ahead of us in the direction of Oxford Street.

Holmes quickened our pace until we had decreased the distance which divided us by half. Then, still keeping a hundred yards behind, we followed into Oxford Street and so down Regent Street. Once our friends stopped and stared into a shop window, upon which Holmes did the same. An instant afterwards he gave a little cry of satisfaction and, following the direction of his eager eyes, I saw that a hansom cab with a man inside, which had halted on the other side of the street, was now proceeding slowly onward again.

"There's our man, Watson! Come along! We'll have a good look at him, if we can do no more."

At that instant I was aware of a bushy black beard and a pair of piercing eyes turned upon us through the side window of the cab. Instantly the trapdoor at the top flew up, something was told to the driver, and the cab flew madly off down Regent Street. Holmes looked eagerly round for another, but no empty one was in sight. Then he dashed in wild pursuit amid the stream of the traffic, but the start was too great, and already the cab was out of sight.

"There now!" said Holmes bitterly as he emerged panting from the tide of vehicles. "Was there ever such bad luck and such bad management, too? Watson, if you are an honest man you will record this also and set it against my successes!"

"Who was the man?"

"I have not an idea."

"A spy? A shadow?"

"Well, it was evident from what we have heard that Baskerville had been very closely shadowed by someone since he's been in town. How else could it be known so quickly that it was the Northumberland Hotel which he had chosen?"

While diverted by that speeding cab, Dr. Mortimer and the baronet had vanished. "There is no object of our following them now," said Holmes. "The shadow has departed and will not return. We must see what further cards we have in our hands and play them with decision. Could you swear to that man's face within the cab?"

"I could only swear to the beard."

"And so could I — from which I gather that in all probability it was a false one. A clever man upon so delicate an errand has no use for a beard save to conceal his features. Come in here, Watson."

He turned into one of the district messenger offices, where he was warmly greeted by the manager. "Ah, Wilson, I see you have not forgotten the little case in which I had the good fortune to help you?"

"No, sir, indeed I have not. You saved my good name, and perhaps my life."

"My dear fellow, you exaggerate. I have some recollection, Wilson that you had among your boys a lad named Cartwright who showed some ability during the investigation."

"Yes, sir, he is still with us."

"Could you ring him up?—thank you! And I should be glad to have change of this five-pound note."

A lad of fourteen, with a bright, keen face, had obeyed the summons of the manager. He stood now gazing with great reverence at the famous detective.

"Let me have the Hotel Directory," said Holmes.

"Thank you! Now, Cartwright, there are the names of twenty-three hotels here, all in the immediate neighborhood of Charing Cross. Do you see?"

"Yes, sir."

"You will visit each of these in turn."

"Yes, sir."

"You will begin in each case by giving the outside porter one shilling. Here are 23 shillings."

"Yes, sir."

"You will tell him that you want to see the waste-paper of yesterday. You will say that an important telegram has miscarried and that you are looking for it. You understand?"

"Yes, sir."

"But what you are really looking for is the centre page of the Times with some holes cut in it with scissors. Here is a copy of the Times. It is this page. You could easily recognize it, could you not?"

Yes, sir."

"In each case the outside finding it. There are 10 shillings porter will send for the hall over in case of emergencies. porter, to whom also you will Let me have a report by wire give a shilling. Canonization Approved

VATICAN CITY (Reuters)—A solemn consistory of 20 cardinals and 100 bishops Thursday approved the canonization of Pope Pius X, the "peasant pope," who died in 1914.

Pope Pius XII, in white silk robes with train and red shoulder cape, presided over the ceremony, seated on a raised throne under a red canopy.

The "peasant pope," who died of disappointment at the failure of his attempts to avert the First World War, will be proclaimed a saint at an open-air rite in St. Peter's Square May 29. The last pontiff to be so honored was Pius V (1566-1572). He was canonized in 1712.

The consistory also gave assent to the canonization of five other saints, a French missionary, three Italian priests and an Italian nun. They will be canonized together at ceremonies June 12 and 13.

Garden Notes

Holiday Handy For Odd Tasks

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Isn't it lucky that good Queen Victoria was born on the 24th of May instead of January or December? Here we are with a grand long week end ahead, just at a time when it is needed most to catch up on all those arrears of garden work.

In many gardens this week end, one of the first jobs will be to pull up the spring-flowering plants in the ornamental beds and replace them with summer-flowering bedding-out plants.

If you have had forget-me-nots among your spring bulbs or wallflowers, don't consign them to the compost heap, but loosen the soil a bit under a shrub in some out-of-the-way corner of the garden and throw the pulled-up plants there. The forget-me-not has the happy faculty of ripening and shedding its seed even after the plant has been uprooted, and if you'll look in that spot a little later in the year, you'll find a whole host of forget-me-nots seedlings all ready for transplanting.

CHOPPED UP

When the wallflowers are pulled up, as each one comes out I chop it into two-inch lengths with secateurs or strong scissors," allowing the bits to fall on the beds, but discarding the roots. These chopped-up plant stems are spaded in, and serve three purposes: They add humus to the soil, they keep it open in texture and better aerated, and during the rotting process, they tie up the nitrogen-producing bacteria so that the summer bedding plants will be slightly starved for nitrogen, making them produce more flowers and fewer leaves.

I am a great believer in bone meal as the fertilizing agent to be dug into beds for summer-flowering annuals. It supplies all the elements required for a good floral display without causing lush green growth, and it supplies these elements slowly, and over a long period of time. Moreover, it is a safe fertilizer—it is almost impossible to injure plants with an overdose. That's for me, as I tend to be rather heavy-handed with the fertilizers.

DUAL PURPOSE

Beds which have been ablaze with the color of spring-flowering bulbs always pose something of a problem, as you have to think ahead to next spring's display, while still providing some color in the beds. If you are planting the taller-growing annuals such as snapdragons, zinnias or asters, it is far better to leave the bulbs undisturbed, leaving the foliage to die down naturally. The bedding plants can be arranged in such a fashion as to conceal the unsightly bulb foliage as soon as they have made a little height.

This doesn't work, of course, if dwarf plants are going in the beds as summer replacements, and it becomes necessary to dig up the bulbs and move them to a row in the vegetable garden to finish their growth. A lot of garden books use the term "heeling in" for this operation, which to me conveys a rather careless flinging them in a trench and throwing some dirt on them. This is no good. Transplant your bulbs with all the care you would use for any other plant in full growth.

City Soldiers Home in Time For Big Day

The May 24 celebrations will have a special significance for five Victoria soldiers when they dock in Seattle Monday after serving 12 months in Korea.

The men are among 600 Canadians who have just completed a year of duty with the 25th Canadian Infantry Brigade.

They are Sgt. J. Turner, 983 Bewdley; Gnr. J. R. A. Desbois, 1891 Beach; Gnr. N. G. Gavin, 527 Esquimalt; Gnr. E. V. Salter, 3276 Linwood," and Gnr. T. C. Noble, 2528 Prior.

With the group is Gnr. A. J. Command of Nanaimo.

Eat and Grow Younger

High in Protein, These Recipes Flavorsome, Too

BY LELORD KORDEL

This is another in a series of daily articles from the best-selling book, "Eat and Grow Younger," which gives the invaluable information on nutrition, and one of the simplest and most effective of diets. By following the tenets set out here, you can literally eat and grow younger.

HIGH-PROTEIN MEAT LOAF

1 lb. ground meat (this may be all beef or lamb, all liver or heart, or a mixture of muscle and organ meats)
4 tbsp. wheat germ or millet meal
4 tbsp. sunflower seed meal
½ cup powdered skim milk
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 tsp. lemon juice
¼ cup milk
1 clove garlic
4 tbsp. finely chopped green pepper or red pimento
1 tbsp. cooking oil
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. thyme
pinch of sweet basil
dash of nutmeg or mace
2 tbsp. grated Italian cheese, if desired

Let the peeled, split garlic clove soak in the liquid milk for at least 30 minutes to 1 hour before using. Mix all the ingredients in a large bowl, governing the amount of liquid milk according to the consistency—not too soft, nor yet too stiff to mold well.

Shape into a large loaf and place in the greased bottom of a covered baking pan or small roaster. Spoon about ¼ cup of tomato juice or diluted tomato paste over the top of the loaf. Cover and allow to bake in a moderate oven (350 deg. F) for 45 to 55 minutes, removing the cover for the last 10 minutes to allow slight browning on top.

This is your basic meat-loaf recipe, to be used as presented, or adapted in any variations that occur to you, or that fit the ingredients you have on hand.

You'll find this high-protein meat loaf as delicious cold as hot, and it makes a splendid low-cost meat for lunch boxes or buffet suppers. If you want to garnish it, arrange crescents of hard-cooked egg with strips of red pimento and hulled sunflower seeds into flower and petal designs on top of the loaf after it comes from the oven.

By serving this high-protein entree at least once a week, allowing for some to be left over for lunches or a meal the next day, you will find the meat budget stretching further than you had expected.

SAVORY POT ROAST

3 to 4 lbs. pot roast (chuck, rump, shoulder or heel of round)
3 tbsp. cooking oil
1 clove garlic
2 tbsp. grated lemon rind
2 cups sour cream
salt to taste

Rub the roast well with salt and the cut halves of the garlic clove. Then place the garlic in the sour cream to flavor it. Rub the entire roast with about ½ of the cooking oil in order to seal in the juices and flavor. Heat the remainder of the oil in a Dutch oven or heavy, deep iron skillet which can be tightly covered.

Brown the roast lightly in the oil, add the grated lemon rind, allowing to simmer a few minutes before pouring the sour cream over the roast and spooning up the pan gravy with the lemon rind over the meat to let the flavor penetrate into the roast. Cover and cook over a very slow fire for about 2½ to 3 hours, basting the meat often to avoid drying and sticking in the pan.

About 30 minutes before the meat is done (and remember that the sour cream will help tenderize it), add 3 or 4 cleaned whole carrots to brown in the sauce around the meat. The garlic clove may be left in the sauce for the first 30 minutes, then removed.

This roast is excellent for slicing cold, and it's one left-over the family won't mind seeing the second day in a row. When served cold, add to the menu a hot baked potato, a cooked green vegetable and a fruit mold.

HUNGARIAN LAMB

3 lbs. shoulder lamb cut into small cubes
1 cup thick sour cream, or yogurt
2 cups tomato juice, or 4 tbsp. tomato paste diluted with 3 cups water
2 small onions
2 tbsp. cooking oil or butter
1 tbsp. minced parsley
½ tsp. salt
dash of paprika
sprig of fresh sweet marjoram, or a pinch each of dried marjoram and summer savory

Heat the oil in a Dutch oven or covered chicken fryer, add the finely minced onions and brown lightly. Add the cubes of lamb from which all fat and tendons have been removed, and into which the salt and paprika have been well rubbed. Allow to brown lightly. Stir in the tomato juice, parsley and herbs. Cover and let simmer over a very low flame on top of the stove for about 2 hours.

The covered skillet or Dutch oven may also be placed in a slow (300 deg. to 325 deg. F) oven for about the same length of time. Add a little hot water if the sauce around the meat cooks low. Immediately before serving, stir in the sour cream or yogurt, mixing it well with the meat and tomato juice. Garnish the platter with sprigs of fresh mint, if available.

Victoria Actress Rising in Films

Former York Theatre actress, Karen Kadler, who is now in Hollywood, having her hair arranged by York hairdresser Mary Hinks for her appearance in "Thunder Rock" here.

A young actress who became well known to Victoria theatre-goers while the York Theatre was in operation, has begun the climb to success in Hollywood.

Karen Kadler, who played lead roles in several of the York Theatre's first productions here, has had a screen test and has been featured in an article in Pageant Magazine.

Miss Kadler left Victoria after the York's presentation of "Ghost Train," headed for film-land, with a professional acting career in mind.

It took Miss Kadler a year's work in a plywood factory to save $1,000 to get to Hollywood, but only 10 days of scouting around to line up a successful screen test.

The incident that led to the screen test arose when she stopped to talk to a woman whose poodle dog managed to tangle its leash in Miss Kadler's legs on a Hollywood street, and was sent by the woman to a theatrical agent.

Karen was featured in the magazine among seven newcomers to Hollywood, that the movie experts expect to see and hear more of.

The Oak Bay Pavilion

Architects in Contest

Victoria architects will compete for the design of a pavilion in Oak Bay's Carnarvon Park, municipal councillor and architect Pat Birley said yesterday.

Arrangements for the contest are being made with the architects' association following approval of the project by the municipal council.

The pavilion will include changing rooms and showers, public facilities, caretaker's quarters, a concession booth, and storage space for play ground and garden equipment.

LANDSCAPING

Designers will have to include landscaping with shade trees. Floodlights poles will be erected for night use of the park.

The winning design will be carried out on a regular fee basis.

A three-member jury will be selected, two nominated by the municipal council and one an architect to be appointed by the association.

Mr. Birley will not be eligible for the contest.

Lady Astor 'Aging 32'

PLYMOUTH, England (AP)—Lady Astor, first woman member of the British parliament, was 75 Wednesday but described herself as "a rather aging 32."

"Older people must not look back," the American-born peeress said.

"They must take life day by day. I am just as keen as I ever was about the things that matter."

In order that older people may have friendly contact with their contemporaries, a necessary offset to loneliness, many churches, service clubs and other groups have helped to provide social and recreational facilities for the senior citizens of the community.

Radar Proving Useful In Detection of Cancer

NEW YORK (UP)—Quick and easy cancer detection by radar moved into the realm of possibility today.

Scientists conducting a special study said that echoes of high frequency sound told the difference between malignant and benign tumors 38 times out of 41 tries.

The scientists said with customary caution that the radar "echoes" process "made possible the early detection and diagnosis of irregularities of tissue structure and sufficiently small size to be of value in the control of cancer."

LIMITED FIELD

They limited themselves for the time being, to the beginning stages of cancers of the breast, the upper and lower gastro-intestinal tract, the uterine cervix, and the prostate gland. These locations are accessible to probing echoes of high frequency sound.

Dr. J. J. Wild and John M. Reid, of the University of Minnesota and St. Barnabas Hospital, Minneapolis, tried their apparatus and refined techniques on 41 women with breast lumps. The echoes indicated 20 of the tumors were malignant and 21 were benign. Subsequent biopsies by laboratory examinations of the actual tissue confirmed the echoes in 19 of the 20 and 19 of the 21.

First Road Report Issued by Bureau

First road report published this year by the B.C. Government Travel Bureau is now off the presses.

The department has a mailing list of 1,000 auto clubs, oil companies, radio stations, newspapers and travel bureaus for this useful map which shows road conditions all over the province.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY

They will be published every week during the tourist season.

"There is no excuse for a traveler not knowing the conditions of the roads," travel commissioner Ernest Evans said yesterday.

"We believe if the people know they have five miles of rough road they will go over it, but if they hit it without knowing they will turn back."

He said the department issues a strictly truthful report, available to anyone.

Madcap Marketing

IN a frantic effort to clear out last year's surplus butter stocks before this year's production pours into the government warehouses, the Dominion Prices Support Board has slashed the price to the trade of 30,000,000 pounds which it has had in store for months. At a price of 55½ cents a pound the wholesalers are now being offered butter which the government bought in at 58 cents. The taxpayers will have to stand the loss, and that will amount to $750,000 if the government succeeds in getting rid of the surplus before it spoils, which is problematical.

Consumers will not receive any of the benefits which in the case of other commodities would accrue to them from a glutted market. Agriculture Minister Gardiner has informed the Commons that the prices support board will continue this year to protect the grocers' price at the 58-cents level, and will go on buying as much Canadian-produced butter as is surplus to consumers' demand, on exactly the same basis as it bought in last year's surplus.

Confronted with the problem of turning over the 1953 surplus in a market where demand is less than the seasonal supply, the government had these alternatives: It could reduce stocks by removing price support until it had disposed of the surplus, thus temporarily depressing prices and passing along some benefit to consumers, who have to pay for all losses on the board's operations anyhow; or it could continue to support prices by buying a pound of new butter for every pound of old it sells to the wholesalers. This would mean absorbing the cost of preparing butter for storage, amounting to about two cents a pound, so that fresh butter could be put into warehouses for a year to enable stockpiled butter, which would spoil if held any longer, to be sold to the public. Though it has been through all this before, that is what the government chose to do.

What seems to have escaped Mr. Gardiner is the fact that this sort of juggling plays right into the hands of the margarine industry. The federal agriculture minister, who poses as the beneficent father of the butter industry, who fought to the last ditch against lifting the old ban from the sale of margarine, actually is the best salesman the margarine trade ever had. People don't buy margarine because they prefer it to butter; they buy it because it is cheaper.

There is no export market for Canadian butter because this country cannot compete with others producing at lower cost. The only market for Canadian butter is at home, and that market is over-supplied—not because there are not enough potential consumers but because the price, thanks to Mr. Gardiner's "protection," is higher than people are willing to pay. The butter industry will never be able to adjust itself to this situation so long as the government refuses to let it respond to the seasonal ebb and flow of the market. People will just go on eating margarine.

A New Look at Admirals Road

HOPE has been revived in Esquimalt by Mr. Ralph Campney's promise to look into the Admirals Road situation when he gets back to Ottawa. Presumably this means the associate defense minister will try to persuade his chief, Mr. Claxton, that since it is naval traffic that tears up this small stretch of road there is some responsibility for its repair resting on the federal doorstep. To date Mr. Claxton has been wholly indifferent to Esquimalt council pleas, and only a few weeks ago refused even to talk to its representatives on the subject.

The defense minister said then that circumstances would have to be extraordinary before his department would consider paving for roads. One might have thought his visit here would open his eyes in this respect. One trip along Admirals Road should convince even the most obdurate defense minister that this thoroughfare is directly linked to the naval establishments in his charge. If the relation of Esquimalt to HMCS Naden does not take the road out of the ordinary class it is difficult to know what would give it extraordinary status.

It is perhaps strange also to hear it said that Mr. Claxton is not familiar with Esquimalt's case, whereas Mr. Campney is. This might suggest that the associate minister, having discussed the problem a year ago with the Esquimalt reeve, has been none too successful in posting his senior as to the details, since one would not like to assume he has done nothing about the matter in the interval. Perhaps the new look promised will bear fruit, however, and at long last Esquimalt will get a square deal from the defense department. Esquimalt councillors must nevertheless sometimes wish a federal election were in the offing, because then promises are often translated into action before a certain fateful day.

De Valera Regime Ends

PRIME Minister Eamon de Valera's Fianna Fail government toppled in Eire yesterday as counting proceeded in the general direction which swept a coalition group under John Costello, a Dublin barrister, into power in the Dail. Engrossed with more momentous affairs in flux in Europe and elsewhere, the world hardly noticed the passing of the republican regime which cut southern Irish ties with Great Britain, led Eire into virtual isolation in Commonwealth affairs, and revived the bitterness of border bickering between the north and the south.

The Finn Gael party, which holds the majority of seats in the successful coalition, has yet to show what its stand will be in Eire's external relations. Mr. Costello is known as a moderate, but he has with him in the coalition group some adherents who are not. The election campaign turned mainly on Eire's economic difficulties under the de Valera regime, and the result had been presaged in the previous election in which the Finn Gael made strong headway in the balloting. The 40-odd seats give it the leadership, but not the sole voice, of the new coalition. The coalition, however, will have absolute control in the new House.

Mr. de Valera retained his seat in the Dail at the head of a considerable group of his own party. As new leader of the opposition he may remain a political factor in the realignment of parties in spite of the reverse. The Costello coalition has had an uneasy path towards assumption of office, and will now have to stand the test of performance. The de Valera government was not defeated because of its republicanism, but because it failed to solve Eire's economic dilemma under its self-imposed isolation from natural markets. Geography, however, will remain the same for Mr. Costello, and the geography of isolation is easily told—one stands alone.

Interpreting the News

'Terrible Thing' a Fact

BY J. M. ROBERTS, JR.
Associated Press News Analyst

PRESIDENT Eisenhower says it would be a "terrible thing" if the Communist dictatorship were to establish an outpost on this continent.

Well, it already has. Arms aren't shipped from behind the Iron Curtain unless the Communists know and have confidence in those who receive them.

The question is no longer a matter of classifying the Guatemalan situation. It is what the president is going to do about it.

Guatemala turns a deaf ear to all complaints. Denied arms by the United States, she says it is her sovereign right to buy them where she wishes. That is true. It is who wishes to sell them to her that is disturbing.

Nicaragua now has definitely put the finger on the Guatemalan government as a Communist "outpost" by breaking diplomatic relations, charging its neighboring officials with being responsible for distribution of Communist literature in Nicaragua.

In British Honduras, Communist leaders are trying desperately to subvert the independence movement which recently won a great election victory.

Communists have been able to stage a country-wide walkout of workers on U.S.-owned plantations in Honduras, and the whole country has been virtually crippled.

There is trouble over kindred issues in Costa Rica.

Faced with a similar and even less dangerous situation in British Guiana, Britain moved promptly and with force to put down a Communist movement.

Britain also should be vitally interested in the Central American situation because of British Honduras.

This community of interest to Britain and the United States in Latin-America suggests that some sort of joint action might be possible to scotch the Reds.

The United States, however, apparently intends to try to do something first through the anti-Communist pact adopted recently at the Caracas inter-American conference.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings"

By TOM TAYLOR

FUNNY the human instinct to kick a ball. Most males indulge in it, even if the ball is a pebble in their path, or a big skelf or a rolled up wad of paper. Small boys on the school playground along the street here—a dolorous stretch of broken surface by the way—exhibit this trait too. Usually they are playing basketball but every now and then one of them yields to temptation and gives the object of his affections a hefty punt.

I daresay even Adam indulged this universal urge, perhaps kicked the apple that led to his fall—in disgust.

Next week as some of you know Victorians shall see amongst them ball-kickers par excellence, although this piece isn't coined to praise the Glasgow Rangers. They intrude only because they'll be demonstrating this morning's theme in professional action.

It was an incident in the Himalayas that provoked thoughts of ball-kicking, involving Sir Edmund Hillary. You will remember that tall New Zealander. It seems no time at all since he was telling us how he got to the top of Mount Everest, and lo he is back among snow-capped peaks. Incidentally, I wonder who's keeping his bees.

Hillary isn't bent on another top-of-the-world climb, although he cast a fond glance the other morning—from about fifty miles distant—at "our old friend Everest." No, he is on an exploratory tour of the Makalu region ten miles distant, as the crow flies that is.

When his party arrived at a certain Nepalse village, he writes in a recent dispatch, "we produced one of our most treasured possessions—a Rugby football—and started kicking it around the dusty square in the centre of the village."

Apropos our theme you may guess what happened. To begin with I suppose the natives goggled at such strange behaviour. The Sherpas undoubtedly would wonder if their sahibs, as they call them, had suddenly gone mad. But in no time at all the local inhabitants reacted to a primeval urge and overwhelmed the New Zealanders. Each of them, says Hillary, was "filled with an admirable determination to have a hearty kick at the ball."

Sir Edmund was not very discreet. One of these days now the Nepalese, or perhaps the Sherpas themselves, will be invading his home country to demonstrate how football really should be played.

This urge to kick a ball will out, you see. Suppressed in team form for centuries it is now sweeping the world, as teams like the Glasgow Rangers have found recently to their astonishment. Some 70 or 80 countries now play soccer, which, begging Sir Edmund's pardon, embraces the supreme technique of smiting a ball with the foot.

The Himalyan incident reminds me of one in my own personal past. Once when crossing a sabkhet with some other fellows, the very one allegedly crossed by the fleeing Israelites, a football was produced and quickly punted about from one to another. We were supposed to be route-marching but that was a trifle compared to our not-too-deeply-hidden instinct to kick something. In a short while some of our Egyptian camel drivers tried to get in on the pastime but we shooed them away.

Undoubtedly we had another deep-rooted instinct, that the pupils might learn too much from the masters. And it was a true one. Not so long ago the Rangers had an Egyptian player on their team.

The next time you are cutting your lawn, however, and observing a twig cluttering up your green sward you kick it into the middle of the street, remember you are obeying an impulse that has come down to you from, shall we say, Adam himself.

International Commentary . . .

Unwavering Soviet Pattern

By MAURICE LATEY, from London

THERE is an almost automatic regularity in the pattern of the conferences between the Soviet bloc and the free world. This is not altogether surprising, since the aims of the two sides remain unchanged and there are certain constant geographical and strategic factors in the situations which they meet to discuss. Hence the close parallel between the Communist proposals, first for Germany, then for Korea and now for Indo-China.

First, there is always the demand for the withdrawal of all foreign troops. This arises from the fact that the disputed situations are caused by Communist attempts to expand on the periphery of the great land mass which they control. Hence the withdrawal of foreign troops, whether in Germany, Korea or Indo-China, would mean that the forces of the Western powers or the United Nations would have to retreat across hundreds of miles of ocean while foreign Communist forces, whether Soviet or Chinese, would remain poised on the frontier.

Secondly, Communist proposals for elections in the countries concerned always exclude international supervision, describing it as foreign intervention.

Thirdly, the Communists always insist that the minority which they represent should have equal representation or a power of veto in the bodies to be set up to supervise the elections. Further, they always demand full freedom for what they call "democratic organizations" in preparing and holding the elections — by which they mean Communist-controlled trade unions and youth movements and the like.

All these ingredients in the Communist plan for domination are camouflaged with phrases about independence, self-determination and national unity. Every one of these characteristics is to be found in the Viet-Minh Communist proposals for Indo-China.

Confronted with the same challenge over and over again, the Western reply is, in every case, based on the same fundamental principles. It sets real freedom of choice and independence against the crushing weight of the Communist monolith.

The answer is not always an easy one. It is not easy in the case of Indo-China. There, independence could not be preserved by local forces but only by the troops of the French Union. It was a hard fact that these French Union troops were fighting to give the people a freedom of choice that might go against France. Yet it was a fact that was in the end recognized and accepted. The treaties initialed last month with Vietnam and the agreements reached with Laos and Cambodia meant precisely that.

At Geneva the Vietnamese, Laotian and Cambodian representatives have been able clearly to refute the Communist accusations of French colonialism and foreign intervention by asserting that the way to independence and sovereignty lies with the French Union. From the point of view of independence, as the Vietnamese foreign minister put it, the conflict waged by Viet Minh has no meaning.

In this matter the French, in their proposals for a cease fire, have recognized a "certain distinction between Vietnam and the other two associated States of Indo-China. The existence of the powerful rebel army in Vietnam indicates a significant body of opinion — how numerous it is impossible to say — that sees the road to national independence, however mistakenly, in the Communist direction. There, it is a matter of finding a means of putting the question to the free decision of the people.

In Laos and Cambodia, however, the choice has already been made in the sense that there is no civil war but simply an invasion from outside by foreign Communist forces. The Cambodian foreign minister has pointed out that French advisers are there by the wish of the Cambodian people who have complete control over their own police, justice and military affairs and other technical matters. The Laotian foreign minister pointed out that, at the time of the Communist invasion last year, the Laotians were surprised to hear of the alleged existence of a free Laotian movement headed by a prince who had left the country when a schoolboy. In fact, said the foreign minister, the free Laotian movement had existed in order to secure certain guarantees of independence from France, and when these were given in 1949 it had voluntarily dissolved itself.

So much for the rights and wrongs of the case. In the case of Laos and Cambodia it is simply a matter of security, the withdrawal of the Communist invaders and leaving the people to settle their own destiny. In Vietnam there is the more difficult problem of finding some legal and democratic framework in which the people can decide freely and peacefully which way independence lies.

It is no secret that in the past many people in Britain and the United States have been "critical about French delays in granting independence to the Associated States of Indo-China, though anxious to make a treaty of such independence at a time of war was difficult." Now Britain, which has freely given independence to some 600,000,000 people in Asia, and America with her profoundly anti-colonial tradition, both fully endorse the French policy, recognizing that in it lies the hope of Indo-Chinese independence combined with security.

The Western aims are then clear enough. The problem is how to realize them—a problem of power. From this point of view the Communists are in a strong position, following the victory of Dien Bien Phu. But they are acting as if they were in the same position as they were in 1945 when the Red army had overrun the whole of Eastern Europe and the Western powers had to accept their terms in that area.

However, that is not the situation in Indo-China, and the Western powers have learnt from their experience in 1945 that, whatever the balance of power, they gain nothing by departing from their principles.

One-Armed Driver

(From The Hamilton Spectator)

A COURT in Bristol, England, has overruled the local licensing authorities and given a one-armed man permission to drive a suitably modified bus for private hire work, and we are glad.

We would ourselves ride in his bus with perfect confidence, because we are sure his safety record will be as good as any two-armed driver's—if not better.

If anything is needed to confirm one's faith in the strength of the human spirit, it can be found in the remarkable number of cases in which men have, out of the pride in their manhood and the sheer determination of their hearts, made themselves more competent at their jobs after the loss of a limb than they were before.

A group of school children were brought by their teacher to a meeting of the village board in the hope that they would learn something about government. Occasionally the mayor interrupted the board proceedings to explain things. The youngsters squirmed and looked around at maps on one wall and a huge moose's head on another. When the meeting closed, the mayor asked, "Any questions, children?"

"Yes," said one small boy, "Who shot the moose?"

A professor points out that the average family is getting progressively smaller, despite the fact that we seem to hear more about babies than ever before. Maybe the explantation is that in the modern, small family a baby is naturally more noticeable.

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

HOW do all the little uptown shops in city and town survive? No matter how far out from downtown area of a city you go, there you will find small local shopping sections, sometimes consisting of three or four stores. In the smaller cities and towns, in the most unexpected places, there will be a little shop serenely carrying on its trade in an area almost wholly residential. When you consider the highly organized trend of modern merchandizing, you cannot help but wonder how the little tradesmen, far off the beaten track, make ends meet.

I supposed that it was perhaps convenience that kept them alive. They survived on the casual trade of people who needed something in a hurry, something small, trivial. It would be a precarious existance.

"No," said a friend of mine who runs just such a little shop dealing in magazines, smallwares, a few dry-goods supplies, souvenirs, a little china. "The main reason we survive is that customers can get waited on. There are far more people than you might suppose who have a deep-dyed hatred of the big stores, with all their push and shove. Shopping becomes a contest there, and some people just aren't interested in contests. They like to be waited on. And they save all the trade they can for the small neighborhood shops.

"You might be surprised the number of lonely people there are in the community who like to drop around the local shops for a little friendly conversation. Lonely folk don't get much satisfaction in a big busy downtown store. It only makes them feel lonelier to see all those throngs of people, not one of whom has so much as a friendly glance for them. The clerks are far too busy for conversation.

"So these lonesome ones spend the afternoon chatting around the stores of the neighborhood. We small shopkeepers know that. We welcome them, and enjoy their conversation. We are supplying a needed social service. In return, we get a little business. It's very comfortable, all around."

Reeve of Oak Bay Hits Amalgamation As Not Worthwhile

Amalgamation with Victoria and other municipalities would not be worth the slight saving that would result, Oak Bay's Reeve F. E. Norris said last night.

Speaking to a dinner meeting of the Oak Bay Kiwanis Club, Reeve Norris outlined his objections to amalgamation and talked of the few benefits the municipality would derive from it.

"Many people have no real understanding of the workings of a municipality," he said. "They think it is a piece of land, bounded by geographical markings and badly managed by a group of morons. I beg to differ with that."

He said the personalized services that people get from a municipality, and take for granted, would vanish with amalgamation.

JUST A SCOLDING

"The policemen in Oak Bay know the people here. If your child gets into some trouble it will probably result in a bawling out from a policeman who knows him, and end there," he said.

But in an amalgamated community, mischief-making would no doubt end in juvenile court, with charges pressed by strangers who don't know the child or his parents, he said.

"Our police officers know you and your families personally, and are there looking after your particular interests," he said.

The same personal service applies in the matter of a fire department, he said. "We are proud of our fire department in Oak Bay."

The amalgamation of police and fire departments into a metropolitan force would also cost the people of Greater Victoria more money, he said.

"You can rest assured that if there was a metropolitan force, the wages of the outside departments would be raised to meet the scale of the city force, not the other way around."

He said the amount of equipment in such a case would remain the same, and quite possibly the staffs of the departments.

As for public works, he again brought forward the matter of personalized services.

"When you phone the engineer's office now about a matter pertaining to your part of the municipality, he knows exactly what you are talking about. But with a metropolitan department you would have to deal with someone over the phone who probably would not even know where your street was located.

"It is for this type of personal service that you pay by having separate municipalities," he said.

PASSED BURDEN

The greatest saving to Oak Bay through amalgamation would be in school costs, but it would simply be a matter of passing the burden on to others who do not benefit by Oak Bay schools, Reeve Norris said.

"A pride in the community by the officials who run it gives the residents far better service than would be given by men and women who have no personal interest in your affairs," he told club members.

Military Place Wanted

West German Support Forecast

Western Germany will continue to support the free world as long as she does not feel left out of the military picture, Victoria Rotary Club was told yesterday.

The speaker was Lieut.-Col. C. W. Barker, of the German section of the British foreign office, resident in Dortmund. He is visiting Canada on leave.

"Germany is an important and necessary bulwark in the whole defense scheme," said Colonel Barker. He recalled that ratification of the European Defense Community program was given recently by the West German parliament.

EDC SAFEGUARD

The fact that EDC will control the country's arms plans for the next 50 years will prevent any revival of German militarism, the speaker thought.

Colonel Barker said that while there is a hard core that wishes to see a new German high command, the majority of the 50,000,000 people in the Western zones do not want to see it revived.

There are still thousands of Nazis in the country with a longterm movement under way, but the speaker said he did not think they will make any headway against Germany as a whole.

Colonel Barker added that fear of an armed Germany by the Western powers is always a difficulty. France is particularly disturbed.

Although East Germany has closed her borders with a "shoot on sight" zone, he told the Rotarians, refugees are still streaming into the West via Berlin. There are about 9,000,000 refugees in the free zones at present, he said.

Colonel Barker pointed out that at the last German elections members of the extreme parties, from Communists to neo-Nazis, were ousted from office. He said modern Germany is strong politically and economically, and only nine years after she was beaten to her knees in a disastrous world war.

Crofton Asks Water Action

DUNCAN—Fear of a water shortage for Crofton this year has led Crofton water board to ask North Cowichan council to undertake measures to prevent waste of water between the Crofton dam and the reservoir.

A Crofton delegation also complained about coloring of the water by aquatic plants, but North Cowichan vegetation council said it could do nothing. Reeve C. A. P. Murison assured the delegates that the water was quite drinkable, and its quality would be watched carefully.

While council did not think there was any serious loss of water between the dam and the reservoir, Clr. George Whittaker, chairman of the board of works, said the proper solution would be a second dam and elimination of the reservoir. This would increase the storage capacity of the system by 8,000,000 to 10,000,000 gallons, he said.

It was considered that the work is not of an emergency nature, however, and it may be left until reserve finances from the water system provide the estimated $7,500 needed.

There is now about $2,000 of surplus funds.

DUNCAN—The Electrical Contractors' Association of Duncan and district will recommend to the provincial association that steps be taken to standardize electrical equipment for easier operation of various items of home equipment.

This was decided at a meeting of the local association in the B.C. Power Commission offices Wednesday evening. It was pointed out that the "caps" or connectors on electrical equipment are by no means standard, and in many cases equipment cannot be used in some of the home electrical outlets.

According to some contractors, the Duncan, Ladysmith and Chemainus area enjoys the lowest rate on Vancouver Island, and possibly in British Columbia. It was stated that a month's power and light bill for a family of four in an average home is about $1.35 a month lower in this district than in Victoria and Vancouver.

Fishermen Threaten Boycott

CAMPBELL RIVER—Owners of fishboats tying up at the federal government wharf here have threatened to boycott the village's stores if commissioners insist on collecting wharfage fees.

Fishboat owners made the boycott threat when Alex Thomson, who collects the fees, spoke of his difficulty in enforcing collections. The village administers the wharf.

The fishermen agreed to air their grievance to the department of transport agent in Victoria.

Business Bureau Keeps Close Tab On Local Firms

BY ALEC MERRIMAN

More than 3,000 inquiries or complaints are answered every year by the Better Business Department of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

"On the average we handle about 12 a day and we investigate every one," Cy Porter, secretary of the better business department said yesterday.

An investigation and case card system in the chamber office contains a comprehensive report of off-color and borderline business practices in this area.

Three complaints against a firm from three different sources puts that firm in the pink card class, which warrants special surveillance by the department.

Firms with pink cards are approached by the better business group and advised to re-examine their business relations with the public.

PARTICULAR FOES

"We are particularly enemies of certain nefarious operators who prey upon elderly and retired citizens," Mr. Porter said.

Racketeers, slick operators or any business transaction in which a firm or person is unwilling to disclose its method or object, rate special attention.

So-called charity drives in which charities receive small, if any, share of the proceeds have meagre pickings if the better business department hears about it.

The subscription and solicitation service of the bureau is province-wide and can readily ascertain the worth of any appeal for funds.

HUMOROUS SIDE

The job is not without its humorous side.

One lady recently complained about receiving black pepper in a curry container. She had ordered the curry to use in preparation of a special dinner for a number of guests. At the last stage of preparing a special dish she put the "curry" in and to her horror it turned out to be black pepper.

To her it wasn't so humorous and the better business department followed her complaint through to the manufacturers.

The Victoria department receives inquiries from all over Canada and the United States. People write to see if goods are as represented in advertising or if the firms selling them are reputable.

"We handle all we can and those we can't we forward to the nearest better business bureau concerned," Mr. Porter said.

ADVICE GIVEN

He gives the following advice: "Investigate before you invest. Read before you sign. Compare values."

Not all the work done by the better business department is handling of complaints.

The department maintains a subscription service to a large number of business organs and directories. The information in these is available to all chamber members.

No inquiries on credit are answered. These are passed on to reputable credit firms.

"Our department has the moral effect of keeping the business of Victoria clean," Mr. Porter said.

Behavior Course Attracting Many

More than 40 registrations are already in for the series of four weekly classes on the importance of understanding children's behavior.

Speakers at the first meeting will be J. D. Patterson, regional supervisor of the National Film Board, and W. H. Geddes, professor of psychology at Victoria College.

The classes, designed to help parents, teachers, and play group supervisors, will begin next Thursday.

OVER-PROTECTION

A short talk will be given on possible outcomes of over-protection of children. There will be a discussion of the film "Over-Dependency" and a question and answer period.

A certificate will be issued to every person who satisfactorily completes the course.

The meetings will be held at Victoria College every Thursday from 8 to 9.30 p.m.

Registration by mail is advisable. Persons wishing to attend should mail a card to the registrar, Victoria College, stating name, address, phone number and enclosing $2.50 (or $4 for husband and wife).

U.S. Government Sues Canadians, Americans

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The Canadian firms, a former U.S. government Thursday sued seven American citizens and seven Canadians for $88,000 charging fraud in the disposition of surplus U.S. property after the completion of the Alaska Highway in 1943.

The civil suit in Federal District Court specified loss of $34,000 in equipment stored at Dawson Creek, B.C., and sought equal damages plus penalties.

Assistant U.S. Attorney James B. Schnake said the statute of limitations barred criminal indictments.

BY JIM TANG

Things are picking up for the sports fisherman with good salmon fishing reported from Deep Cove to the Goldstream end of Saanich Inlet and the warmer weather of the past few days resulting in improved trout fishing.

Holder's Boathouse reported yesterday that fishing off Deep Cove is "very good." Although there has only been a small number of boats out in the past few days, 20 bluebacks averaging about three pounds and 11 springs up to 14 pounds have been brought in at Holder's while there have been a number of good catches made in private boats.

Largest salmon—the 14-pounder—was boated by Don Cox while Bill Johnston managed to get the best of an 11½-pounder. Fishing is said to be the best at tide changes and the Strip-Teaser lure has been the most successful with quite a few blues taken on the No. 4½ Tom Mack spoon.

Reports were also good from Hall's Boathouse at the Goldstream end with good-sized blues and springs offered. Biggest fish caught Sunday was a 15½-pounder taken by Elwood Smith. Bill Renfrew used a Lucky Louie plug to fool a 15-pounder and two small springs for a successful day. He was fishing deep but Doug Bray was using only six ounces of weight when he hooked a 15-pounder on a Mac's Squid in Misery Bay.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Robinson took nine jacksprings to seven pounds using a Hookum spoon and two ounces of weight while Mr. and Mrs. F. Whitcomb boated six blues and a steelhead on a Kam Lure trolled on the surface. Don Gunn and partner had six springs to 13 pounds; Frank Thew and partner five springs to eight pounds; Frank Curtis, three springs to eight pounds and a steelhead; Jim Coffee, a 10-pound spring and two blues.

Harry Peard reports from the Anchorage Boathouse at Brentwood that there is good fishing in that area, particularly from Whittaker's Point to McKenzie Bay. Early morning has been the best time and the most successful lures have been the No. 4½ Tom Mack, the Mac's Squid plug, and the Strip-Teaser. Weight used varies from four ounces and up to two pounds—or planer.

Both bluebacks, averaging three pounds, and springs are being taken. Biggest checked in the past week was the 20¼-pounder taken Sunday in McKenzie Bay on a Mac's Squid plug by Clive Piercy. He was using two pounds of weight on nylon line. George Wale and John Dewsbury took four springs between 10 and six pounds on a Mac's Squid while Bob Paulls took his limit of five, between six and 10½ pounds, on herring strip. Lance Littlewood used a Strip-Teaser to lure a 14-pounder, hooked off Willis Point.

For trout, the best fishing appears to be in Shawnigan Lake and the Cowichan River. Guide Art Hancock, reached by phone minutes after he returned from a trip, stated that he had limited yesterday in comparatively short order. A hatch of brown sedge flies improved fishing considerably and Hancock scored with the orange bucktail fly, fished dry. The Cowichan was also good earlier in the week. At the same time, Hancock reported that fishing was good in Cowichan Lake with good-sized trout being taken off Goat Island and up to The Narrows. Recommended trolling lures were the No. 1 Stewart spoon, orange flatfish and spinner and worm.

Orange flatfish, orange-bodied flies and spinner and worm were doing business for trollers in Shawnigan Lake. Elsewhere, most reports from the Game Department showed fishing only "fair." An exception was Cusheon Lake on Salt Spring Island, where it was labeled good. Wolf, Matheson and Kemp Lakes held out some hope for dry fly fishing and there is fishing for sea-run cutthroat at the mouth of the Sooke River.

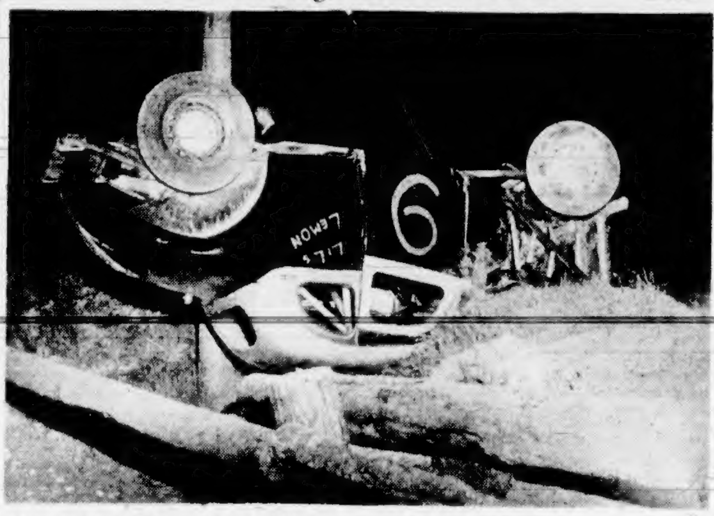
There have been rumors that Stan Williams is catching fish this year—on occasion. So far, they have been unsubstantiated but there could be something to them. Apparently flushed with success, Stan has undertaken to act as "guide" for Seth Halton today . . . Steve Silvertson of the French Creek fishing camp reports that there has been some exceptional blueback fishing in that area of late and that spring-salmon fishing should be good within the near future . . . fishing-plug chain letters continue to make the rounds and, please, don't send any more this way . . . Nanaimo's May 24 celebrations will feature a big fishing derby. It will start at 6 a.m. and end at 4 p.m. with weigh-in at The Anchorage . . . good blueback fishing, with a smattering of springs, is reported from Campbell River by Alan Maclean of Painter's Fishing Resort. Small plugs and spoons and flies have all been doing well . . . and there are still a few steelhead being taken out of the Campbell River. . . . Buttons Heglin has recovered his missing fishing buttons but after the scare doesn't know whether to keep wearing them or put them under lock and key.

Car Racing Has Its Hazards



Car racing has its thrills and chills for the spectators and its hazards for the drivers. At nearly every meet, there is some type of an accident, although the drivers usually manage to escape injuries. This car was driven by Carmen Pascoe in main event of Shearing's Speedway stock-car meet last week end and Pascoe emerged unscratched after his car spun out of control early in race. Stock-car enthusiasts will see plenty of action over holiday week end with meets scheduled at Shearing's Speedway tonight and Monday night. Western Speedway will open its track with a big car meet Saturday night.

Victoria Tyees spotted Vancouver Capilanos the lead once too often at Royal Athletic Park last night but they made it plenty interesting before they lost it in the 10th inning, 10-9.

BRENNER TONIGHT

It was the first game of an important four-game WIL series, which continues tonight. Manager Bill Brenner has nominated himself to do the pitching for the Capilanos. The Tyees will counter with Bob Drilling, who will be seeking his fourth straight win since the Caps beat him in the league opener on April 29. Brenner's record is 3-2.

Last night's defeat dropped the Tyees two and a half games behind the leading Caps and needing the last three games of the series if they are to regain the league lead they held less than two weeks back.

A crowd of about 1,000 fans showed up despite a cool breeze and two major counter attractions and they saw an exciting, free-scoring game in which both managers showed a lot of faith in their starting pitchers. Both Vancouver's George Nicholas and Tyees' Bill Prior were hit solidly but Prior went the full 10 to get charged with his fourth defeat. Nicholas was derricked after the Caps went ahead in the top of the 10th and Rod McKay was sent in to protect his fifth win. Helped out by some dubious coaching at third base, McKay just got by.

TAKE BIG LEAD

Caps started out as if they would make it a rout, scoring three times in the first inning when their first two batters got blooper singles, of which at least one should have been caught, to give them a start. They added three more in the third with big Bob Wellman blasting a two-run homer to climax a rally and the Tyees found themselves trailing by 6-0.

Singles by Don Pries, Prior and Steve Mesner, two bases on balls and an outfield error brought the Tyees four runs in their half of the third. They scored again in the seventh to nullify a sixth-inning run for the Caps and finally went ahead in the eighth, when Art Seguso hit a terrific line-drive home run with Joe Joshua on base to tie it up and Pries followed with a double and Milt Martin with a run-scoring single.

But the Caps, who haven't a weak spot in their batting order, went ahead again in the ninth when an error put Dick Greco on base. Wellman was walked after the count reached 3-1 and Arnie Hallgren followed with a long two-run double to the left field wall.

Seguso tied it a second time in the Victoria ninth when he singled in Armando Sanchez, running for Mesner, with two out. But Marv Williams dropped a home run over the centre-field wall in the 10th and the Tyees couldn't get that one back.

Although they almost pulled it out, the Tyees missed too many chances. In the four-run fourth, they had their runs in and a man on second with no one out for their three, four and five hitters. All three were thrown out at first base by third-baseman Ken Richardson. In the fifth, the Tyees loaded the bags with one out and their four and five hitters due and failed to score.

Their biggest mistake, however, came in the 10th when Martin singled and was sacrificed to second base by Prior. Dain Clay hit a ground single and Martin was waved in from third when it was obvious the only chance for a run would be a bad throw from short right-field. Martin was out by steps and there was a momentary flurry as he rammed into Bob Duretto and the Vancouver catcher retaliated by ramming the ball hard into Martin's mid-riff.

Hallgren was the hitting star of the game with two doubles and two singles in five trips while Wellman added two singles to his home run. Every Cap starter got at least one hit with the exception of Greco, who was treated gingerly and drew three bases on balls. Prior got three hits for the Tyees.

Defensive gems were contributed by Pries, who leaped high to snare a sizzling liner from Chorlton's bat, and Mesner, who made a brilliant out play on a ground ball through the middle by Duretto.

Club May Sign Neil Sheridan

Victoria Tyees, taking dead aim at a second Western International Baseball League championship, announced last night through general manager Reg Patterson that they hope to have outfielder Neil Sheridan in the lineup for the May 24 double-header against Calgary Stampeders.

Sheridan, a veteran who has been a Coast League home run threat for years, has been released by San Francisco Seals, who acquired him earlier in the season from Sacramento. A big fellow who swings from the third-base side of the plate, he packs plenty of long-ball authority and, if he comes, should give the Tyee offense quite a boost.

Sheridan is to give his definite answer this morning, but Patterson said last night the deal was all but closed.

Playing in 170 Coast League games last season, 168 with Sacramento, Sheridan batted a commendable .293 and hit 43 doubles and 13 home runs. He was in the International League part of the 1952 season, with San Francisco in 1951 and 1950, with Seattle in 1949 and 1948 and with San Francisco before that.

Patterson said that negotiations are in progress for a standout pitcher and that definite news of another acquisition is expected within a matter of days.

If the Tyees pick up both Sheridan and a pitcher, manager Don Pries will have to make several decisions before cut-down time of May 29. At least two, probably three players will have to be placed elsewhere.

NEW WESTMINSTER (UP)—New Westminster Royals scored their first win of the Inter City Lacrosse League season Thursday night, blasting Nanaimo Native Sons, 23-13, their fourth straight defeat.

Running and passing the disorganized Native Sons into the floor, Royals raced to a 7-2 first quarter lead, were up 10-8 at the half, and 16-11 after 45 minutes.

BREMNER PLAYS

Sons, with former New Westminster Adanac Bobby Bremner in strip for the first time, made only one serious bid, early in the second quarter, when Max Skinner and Murray Duncan were both penalized for Royals.

Barney Welch, Arnie Duggan, Spud Morelli and Bob Lumley scored to make it 7-7 before the pair returned, and it was a new ball game for awhile.

Royals bounced right back when Johnny MacKay was penalized. Johnny "Gunner" Lackner running in two quick goals. Lackner was the game's star, scoring six times.

Sons, who appeared badly disorganized, stayed close until the final two and one-half minutes of the second period, when Royals ran in three goals, although they had Stan Cowie sitting in the penalty box.

Spud Morelli closed it to 16-12 at 2.15 of the fourth period, but Cowie and Lew Landess punched in quickies within 36 seconds of Morelli's goal for an 18-12 lead.

The Royals wound up their sparkling performance, with four goals in the last minute and 12 seconds.

WIN FIGHTS, TOO

Although much the rougher of the two teams, the Sons lost the game's two fights. MacKay lost a brief fist fight with Royals' Don Frey, and Welch was a one-punch loser to Doug McRory in another brief encounter.

Sons officials also indicated they are dickering with Frank King, centre of the Sudbury Wolves hockey team which lost out in the Allan Cup final to Penticton V's. He plays defense in lacrosse.

Lackner, a rookie last year, was the big scorer, but Royals received terrific support from rookie rearguards Don Sepka and Stan Cowie, and forwards Ivan Stewart and Max Skinner.

Duggan, with two goals and four assists, topped the visitors.

St. Louis Cardinals, leaders in the National League, came up with two big innings Thursday night to swamp the last-place Pittsburgh Pirates 17-4.

Stan Musial provided the bulk of the power, driving in four runs with a triple and homer.

It was the only game played Thursday in the major leagues.

The only other scheduled contest, between New York and Philadelphia in the National League, was postponed because of rain and wet grounds at Philadelphia.

The Cards' victory stretched their lead to one and a half games over the Phils and Brooklyn Dodgers.

Musial's homer, his 13th, moved him ahead of Hank Sauer of Chicago Cubs in the race for major league home run hitting honors. Sauer has 12.

Next game tonight: Chinese Students vs. Navy, 6.30.

Cec Fletchers coasted to a 7-1 victory over Duncan Mayo Lumber at Central Park last night to move into a second-place deadlock with Arrow Furniture in the senior "A" men's softball league standings.

It was the third straight defeat for the up-Island team, making its debut in the league this season, and the Duncan crew dropped into fourth place.

Ab Wiebe, the big redhead, picked up his second straight mound win for Fletchers as he gave up but four scattered hits. Duncan's Albert Smith, who was relieved in the sixth inning, was charged with the defeat.

Fletchers opened the scoring in the first inning with one run and took a commanding lead in the fourth frame when Verne Evans smashed a grand slam home run.

Duncan's only run came in the top of the eighth when the losers bunched two of their hits and were aided by a walk. Duff Chester was the leading hitter for the losers with two singles and a walk in four trips to the plate.

Wiebe struck out five men over the nine innings and issued only two walks. Smith sent one down swinging and walked four in six innings while Mosher, his successor, struck out one and walked three in the remaining innings.

League-leading Navy will be seeking to stretch its lead to four points over the two second-place clubs when it meets Chinese Students at 6.30 tonight.

Touring Netmen in Fine Display; Sedgman Bests Segura and Riggs

BY IAN GLENDAY

Frank Sedgman, the well-built Australian who helped his country to two Davis Cup titles, champion in 1951 and 1952, came and was world's amateur tennis out the top winner in Jack Kramer's professional tournament at Memorial Arena last night.

Playing before an estimated 1,300 spectators, Sedgman gave as fine a display of tennis that has been seen in Victoria in recent years as he powered his way to two singles victory and shared in the doubles win with Pancho Segura.

The Aussie ace, who coaches his country's Davis Cup team, edged Segura, the bandy-legged Ecuadorian, 8-6, in a grimly-played match as Sedgman took a 22-21 lead in his personal fued with the two-fisted Latin-American court wizard.

Bobby Riggs, who only recently joined the tour in place of Don Budge, won his first match in 13 starts to open the evening by downing Pancho Gonzales, 8-6.

Sedgman made short work of Riggs in the final, playing almost flawless tennis in blasting his older opponent by an 8-1 count. Riggs provided one of the highlights with a great display against Gonzales as he made some sensational recoveries and handled Gonzales' powerful service, his big weapon, extremely well.

Sedgman, a graceful, smooth-stroking player, didn't lose a service in the two singles matches. He broke through Segura's serve at the fifth game and it proved to be the only break in the match.

Gonzales appeared to be slightly below par although nothing can be taken away from Riggs, who is far past his peak but hasn't lost any of the court knowledge for which he is noted.

Gonzales twisted his ankle late in his singles match but came back to play in the doubles. Sedgman and Segura won by a 9-7 score.

The powerful Nanaimo club, with Clem Linford setting the pace with three goals, was in command all the way as they sent the Sailors down to their third straight defeat.

Sixty-five minutes in penalties were handed out in the rugged contest, which was enlivened by two fights in the second period, both between Grant Main of Nanaimo and Navy's Anderson.

Nominations for Trophy Close Saturday Night

There are only two days for Victoria sports fans to nominate their choice for the Sid Thomas Memorial Trophy, awarded annually to the person judged to be the outstanding figure in Victoria amateur sports, either as a player or official, during the past sports year.

Saturday night is the deadline for letters to be received by the sports department of The Daily Colonist and a panel of judges will be selected to pick the 1954 winner on the basis of information supplied in the nominating letter.

Two season passes to all home games of the Victoria Tyees will be the reward for the person judged to have written the best nominating letter. The winning letter doesn't have to nominate the person selected for the Sid Thomas award.

Most sports have been represented although nothing has been heard as yet from baseball and basketball fans. With the weather due to get warmer, and the Tyees staying near the top of the Western International League standings, there should be an added incentive for sports followers to send in a nominating letter for a crack at the season passes.

Spotlight on Battles For Individual Honors In School Meet Today

Defending champion Victoria High School will carry a commanding point lead into the final day of the annual inter-high school track and field meet at the city institution's Gyro cinder track this afternoon but the main interest will probably centre on the battles for individual honors in both junior and senior divisions.

Victoria High piled up 71¼ points in three days of field event finals earlier this week. Oak Bay is second with 49½, Esquimalt third with 37¼, and Mount View fourth with 35½ points. Mt. Douglas didn't enter inter-high track competition this year.

DOBBIE LEADS

In the individual races, Bill Dobbie of Esquimalt leads in the senior boys' division with 14 points, followed by his schoolmate Gerry Harris, the defending champion, with 10¼ points. Dobbie has only one race remaining while Harris has two—the 100 and 220-yard events.

Claudia Geiling, who has set two of the six records established in the first three days of competition, has piled up an unofficial total of 12 points in senior girls' events and leads Nita Wood of Victoria High and Ann Redford of Oak Bay by seven points. Pat Lisle of Esquimalt, the defending champion, has three-and-a-half points.

Connie Sampson of Victoria High is far ahead in the junior girls' division with an outstanding 12¼-point total while Ed Kowalyk of the city institution has 6¼ points in junior boys' competition, followed by Victoria High's Joe Hoegert and Mount Views Dave Bowden with five apiece.

In the handicap competition for the Greater Victoria Inter-High Trophy, won last year by Victoria High, the race is much closer. Esquimalt holds the lead with 74½ points. Victoria High is second with 71¼, Oak Bay is third with 66 and Mount View trails with 47.

Under the handicap system, Victoria High's total remains the same; Oak Bay and Mount View's totals are multiplied by one and one-third, and Esquimalt's total is doubled.

Irate Hamner Wants Showdown After Phils' Detective Detected

BY WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball blushed and admitted Thursday that it's not unusual for a major league club to put watchdogs on the after-game habits of some of its players.

While second baseman Granny Hamner of Philadelphia Phillies angrily charged owner Bob Carpenter with "Gestapo tactics," and demanded a showdown, commissioner Ford Frick issued the following statement:

"It's my understanding that all major league baseball clubs, at one time or another, have had their players' habits investigated. It used to be quite a common practice, but I think it has largely discontinued. It's no violation of baseball law."

The case of the baseball "private eyes," long an open secret in the sport, came to public attention this week when Carpenter disclosed he had hired a private detective to check into the social activities of some of his hirelings.

INVESTIGATOR ARRESTED

Hamner, a $25,000-a-year infielder, complained to police that a man had been following him. Police arrested Charles Leland, who turned out to be an investigator who Carpenter said was hired by him.

"I resent this and I intend to do something about it," the 27-year-old player said yesterday. "This stuff of treating me and other ball players like two-year-olds is going to wreck our club."

Carpenter said this was general baseball practice. Baseball men said, well, yes and no.

"We used to have our coaches check the players but discontinued when Bucky Harris became manager," said Calvin Griffith of the Washington Senators.

Roy Mack, general manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, said his dad, Connie Mack, may have hired detectives once or twice in the old days but added: "We haven't done it in recent times at all."

Joe Cronin, general manager of the Boston Red Sox, said: "We don't have players trailed unless there's something definite to work on." The general manager of Milwaukee Braves, Joseph Cairnes, agreed.

"We've never trailed an athlete, at least under the Busch administration," Al Fleishman, St. Louis publicist, said.

Brooklyn's vice-president, Buzz Bavasi, was asked about the Dodgers' policy.

"We are seriously considering hiring some investigators," Bavasi said, "to find out what became of those base hits."

APPLICATIONS NOW BEING ACCEPTED FOR THE NEW REGIMENT OF CANADIAN GUARDS
Second-to-none on the parade ground. Second-to-none on the battlefield. This is the aim of Canada's newest regiment, The Canadian Guards.
Incorporating the colour and smartness of military tradition at its finest, The Canadian Guards ranks first among the Army's regular infantry regiments.
The men who serve in The Canadian Guards must be able to meet the special physical standards required. They will be proud of the title "Guardsman", but they must be ready to live up to the high standards required of a Canadian Guardsman. For The Canadian Guards must be as close to perfect as possible wherever they go — their dress and deportment always above reproach.
Right now there is a requirement for young men who would like to share in the colourful dress and ceremonial activities of the new Canadian Guards. There is a challenge and an opportunity for young men with the ambition to join The Canadian Guards — a regiment destined for the highest honours wherever they are called upon to serve Canadian freedom.
SERVE CANADA AND YOURSELF IN THE ARMY
To be eligible you must be 17 to 40 years of age, skilled tradesmen to 45. When applying bring birth certificate or other proof of age. Canadian Guards qualifications may be obtained from any Recruiting Officer.

Famed Gardens 50 Years Old

Fiftieth anniversary of famed Butchart's Gardens is being observed Sunday.

Developed first in 1904 by the late R. P. Butchart, the gardens have become an outstanding beauty spot on the Pacific Coast.

To mark the anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. Ian Ross, present directors of the one-time limestone quarry, have invited the public to visit the 25-acre floral showpiece without having to pay the usual fee.

The public will be admitted Sunday from 7 p.m. on.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross will be on hand to greet visitors. Mr. Ross is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Butchart.

Sunday night, visitors will have an opportunity to see the spring and early summer blooms by special floodlights along garden borders and underwater in the pools.

Bonded Watchmen Urged

City merchants were advised by the police commission yesterday to bond any persons employed by them as private night watchmen. Commissioner W. J. Hamilton's resolution to this effect was carried after he said the body was inviting trouble if it did not give the warning to the public.

A letter was read from the city solicitor stating that there is no by-law whereby bonding of such persons could be made compulsory.

Chief John Blackstock and Commissioner Gordon Carter stated that at the present time there is nothing to stop undesirable characters from obtaining such employment.

How Much Hot Water Do You Use Each Month?

The Average Family Uses Over 1600 Gallons

Plenty of water is needed in the modern home ... water for bathing, for laundry, for dishwashing, for housecleaning ... in fact there are over 100 uses for hot water in the average household. The average family uses 1,600 gallons each month.

If you depend on a furnace coil for hot water, it can be a problem in the warm weather months. If you have some [illegible] that requires attention down in the basement, someone has to climb about 24,000 steps a year.

If on the other hand you have a modern automatic electric storage water heater, you can have all the hot water your family wants, all the time ... [illegible] A [illegible] automatic storage water heaters [illegible] ... for the [illegible] at a cost of approximately $1.00 per person per month for the average family of four. [illegible] hot water from an automatic electric storage water heater is truly the greatest blessing of the home. Minimum Suggested Size Automatic Storage Water Heater

Number of Bathrooms	Number of Bedrooms	Capacity of Automatic Electric Storage Water Heater
1	2 or 3	40
1	4	50
2	3 or 4	60

If you use an automatic electric washer or dishwasher in your home, increase the capacity recommended above to the next larger size. In this case, [illegible] than shown above ask your appliance dealer or plumber for an individual recommendation.

Worthless Cheques Bring Jail Term

Maurice J. Philion, 564 Whiteside, went to jail for two months from Saanich police court yesterday for obtaining $32 by means of worthless cheques.

Magistrate H. C. Hall, who found the accused guilty last week, said the amount involved was small but that Philion's previous record had to be considered.

Since 1946 the accused had been convicted in several towns in B.C. and Saskatchewan for obtaining money by fraud.

On January 20 and 22 last he had cashed cheques for $20 and $12 at a service station where he had been doing business. Philion was represented by J. Proudfoot.

Fresh from Kellogg's

Who's been eating my Corn Flakes?

Even with wide-awake little goldilocks like this around to keep an eye on the supply, more families ran out of Kellogg's Corn Flakes this morning than any other cereal. It happens every day, because Kellogg's Corn Flakes just naturally taste best to more people. Always have. Still do. Is it any wonder so many women pick up a spare package of Kellogg's Corn Flakes every time they buy any cereal of any kind?

To suit every family's need, Kellogg's now offers the new Handi-Pak too — eight handy "personal portion" boxes of Corn Flakes just right for individual servings.

There's more to the Morris Minor than economy!

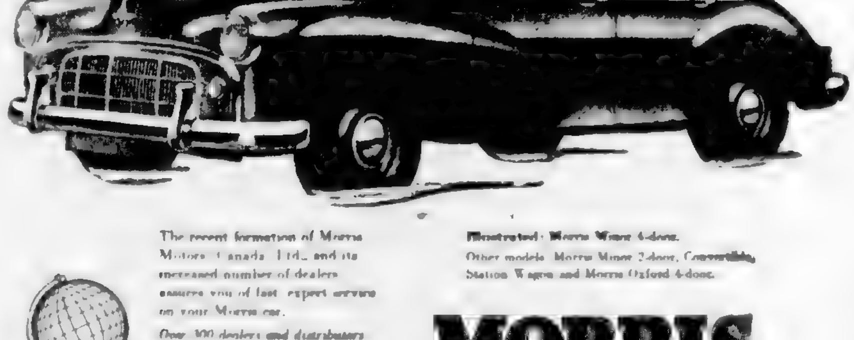
High Compression OHV Engine
The Minor's new overhead valve high compression engine gives more power, faster pickup at no sacrifice in economy. This power packed OHV engine is now standard equipment in all Morris Minors at no increase in price.

Finger-tip Steering
For heavy traffic driving you'll appreciate how easily you can thread your way through congested city streets and into tight parking spaces with the instantly responsive Morris finger-light steering.

Stronger one piece body
The Morris Minor with its "mono-constructed" body and chassis is stronger, safer, quieter, because it is built as a single all-steel unit.

Smoother ride
Through the action of the unique torsion bar suspension, you'll travel the roughest roads in easy-chair comfort.

Your local Morris dealer invites you to drive a Morris . . . you be the judge.



The recent formation of Morris Motors (Canada) Ltd., and its increased number of dealers assures you of fast, expert service on your Morris car.

TV Talk

A good, good morning TV fans—especially to cameraman Paul Johnson who has brought 17 Victoria news events to local TV screens via CBC television news this month.

Last week I saw a color TV set operating in the office of Jim Middlebrooks, KING-TV's color engineer. The set has been brought in for the start of color transmissions on channel 5 last Tuesday.

The set was showing programs in black and white as KING-TV's color transmitting equipment had not yet arrived.

Even so, the set was a remarkable achievement. It can show pictures from any TV station, black and white or color.

Tomorrow KING-TV plans to transmit several shows in color. Victoria TV sets will pick up the color telecasts in normal black and white.

Even though I was a few days too early to actually see color TV as such, I was quite impressed with the new set. There are no trace-lines. The picture is produced by thousands of dots on the screen, like a newspaper photo.

The dots give the picture an illusion of depth not present in normal black and white TV.

By tuning the set to an unused noisy channel we were able to see the colors which the set could produce. The noise interference and "snow" also showed up in color.

The colors produced by television are more realistic than colored photographs or technicolor movies. They resemble very closely the colors normally seen by the eye.

Mr. Middlebrooks thinks that color TV will come with a rush once production hits its stride. It has an appeal which cannot be denied.

A troupe of performing dogs, a team of acrobatic aerialists and a trick bicycle rider will be featured on Super Circus on KING-TV at 6:30 tonight. Mary Hartline and the circus band are good too.

The Perry Como Show on KING-TV [illegible] Wanted [illegible] Falling In Love Is Wonderful.

Joe Giaradello and Pierre Langlois meet in a ten-round middleweight bout at Madison Square Garden on KOMO-TV at 7.

Liberace [illegible] CBUT at 7:30.

Victory At Sea shows [illegible] Europe on KOMO-TV [illegible]

Jane Powell, Ralph Bellamy and Constance Moore will be seen in "Delightfully Dangerous" on Channel [illegible] at 11:30.

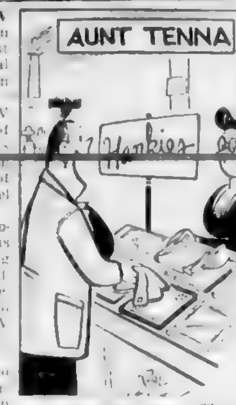
Curtain Time on Channel [illegible] will feature William Gargan in "Mariners In The Sky," the story of a navy pilot who [illegible] the care of a friend's small boy when the friend dies.



"I'll take two dozen. Those daytime serials are getting better than ever."

N.Y. Central Stock Rises To New High

NEW YORK (UP)—Renewed interest in New York Central pushed that stock up sharply [illegible] higher stock market.

Central climbed 1⅛ points to 23⅛ in the day's most active turnover as the battle for control of the road between its present management headed by president William White and financier Robert R. Young appeared to be drawing to a climax.

Interest in the issue was stimulated as Chase National Bank, holder of 800,000 shares of disputed stock under a voting trust, turned over proxies for the shares pursuant to court order, to purchasers Clint W. Murchison and Sid W. Richardson, Texas capitalists and friends of Young.

Chrysler Corp. was another highlight, climbing 1⅛ points to 62¾, also in active dealings. Short interest in the issue, revealed in the New York stock exchange report late Wednesday, totaled 115,648 shares at mid-month, one of the largest totals for any stock in recent years.

Base Metals Firm

TORONTO (CP)—Industrials were strong and base metals firm. The western oils, strong at the opening, closed weaker and golds and Manitouwadge issues and uraniums were down.

Papers, utilities, constructions, foods, refining oils, financial institutions and miscellaneous industrials were strong. Canada Cement was up $2 but Abitibi dropped 12½ cents.

Western oil losses were mostly in pennies. Consolidated Mic Mac added 9 cents.

Golds were down fractions and pennies in all groups. Trading in uraniums was narrow-range.

Breweries Active

VANCOUVER — Over 3,000 shares of Coast Breweries were traded with the closing price 4.25, up 5 cents. B.C. Telephones made a new high at $41, and Consolidated Smelters was up 50 cents at $27.50.

A number of oils continued active. Consolidated Mic Mac closed 25 cents below its best at 2.95, and Liberal was off 40 cents from its peak at 2.80. Keno Oils suddenly came in for attention with a 10 cents rise to 85 cents.

Mines made little progress.

Abitibi Changing Stock

BY HARRY YOUNG
Colonist Business Editor

A new financing program particularly interesting to B.C. investors, is announced by Abitibi Power and Paper Co. Ltd., which has wide interests in the lumber and pulp industries on this coast.

Abitibi proposes to redeem its 1,050,416 preferred stock of $20 par on which it pays at a rate of 7½ per cent.

The shares are callable at $25 including accrued dividends on 30 days' notice, and the cost of redemption to the company will be $27,300,000, including tax on premium.

Abitibi will create 1,000,000 new preferred shares of $25 par, and of these 550,000 will be sold as soon as possible. The terms have not been announced, but the dividend rate is expected to be about 3 per cent less than the 7½ per cent paid on the old stock.

THREE SOURCES

The new preferred will yield $13,750,000 to the company. A further $10,000,000 will be raised through the sale of mortgage bonds, and the remaining $4,00,000 will be met from working capital.

D. W. Ambridge president and general manager says the company is taking this step to avail itself of the present lower rates of interest, and also to take advantage of the company's sound financial position.

Abitibi in 1950 bought out B.C. Pulp and Paper (mills at Woodfibre and Port Alice) and in addition owns 50 per cent of the common stock of Alaska Pine and Cellulose.

Shareholders of Canadian Celanese received a second unpleasant surprise in the last six months when yesterday the company announced that it would cut its June quarterly dividend payment from 30 cents to 15 cents.

Last December the company dropped its rate 30 cents from the regularly quarterly payment of 60 cents which it had [illegible] December 1950.

The announcement sent the common stock of Canadian Celanese spinning down from $22 to $18 in yesterday's stock exchange trading.

SHAREHOLDERS WARNED

Directors of Dominion Textiles announced a July dividend of 10 cents, but warned shareholders that unless the cotton cloth market improves there is no prospect of a further dividend in sight. In a statement the directors note that in the past few days such an improvement in the tone of the market in the U.S. has been noted, and this held out the possibility of easing the intense pressure to which the Canadian cotton manufacturing industry has been subjected for many months.

INCREASE AUTHORIZED

Canadian Atlantic is one of the associates of Pacific Petroleums in the northern B.C. gas developments and in the Westcoast Transmission Pipeline.

RAIN NEW MENACE IN FLOOD THREAT

$30,000 Painting Stolen, Found Next Morning

Stolen from the Art Gallery of Toronto, this painting, "The Elevation of the Cross," by Peter Paul Rubens, was recovered by a gardener in the provincial parliament buildings property. The painting, valued at $30,000, was undamaged by the thief or thieves, who cut it from its frame in the gallery and left it where it would obviously be found. Art experts are in doubt as to the authenticity of the painting, some claiming it is not the work of Rubens, a celebrated Dutch master of the 18th century.—(Central Press Canadian.)

Heavy Fall Serious

Showers and Thunderstorms Predicted Today for Interior

The prospect of rain lends new menace to the flood picture in B.C.'s Interior.

Showers and thunderstorms are predicted for today for the entire Interior region.

"If the rain is at all heavy, it will be pretty bad," said Chief Engineer Neil McCallum of the public works department.

Besides adding its own volume to swollen creeks and rivers, rain would wash huge quantities of melting snow down from the mountainsides.

The Kootenay, the Columbia and the Fraser all were rising rapidly, but water levels were still below the danger mark at major centres.

At a dozen points in the Interior, crews were cleaning up after flash floods in small streams cut highways and railroad tracks.

At Mile 91 north of Prince George the Hart Highway was washed out for 100 feet.

HIGHWAY FLOODED

In the south, near Moyie, traffic on the Southern Trans-Provincial Highway was still splashing through 10 inches of water from the spilling Moyie.

Farther south, Elmer Creek washed away 1,000 feet of roadbed between Curzon Junction and Kingsgate.

CPR gangs had repaired their lines after four washouts.

Near Revelstoke, where the Columbia leaped up two feet in 24 hours, a slide-flood combination knocked out 200 feet of main-line trackage Wednesday. Trains were running again yesterday.

The rail line was also cut in the Nicola Valley, where rising waters reportedly lapped at the outskirts of Merritt.

Between Cranbrook and Yahk the Moyie spilled over the CPR line in four spots.

Near Manning a railway bridge over the Similkameen, knocked out Wednesday, was being replaced by a temporary fill. The river was down three to six inches.

On the 20,000-acre Creston flats, dike patrols kept a round-the-clock watch on the rampaging Kootenay. The river still was four feet below the danger point.

Downstream in Idaho, the Kootenay burst dikes on both sides of Bonner's Ferry and inundated 3,000 acres of farmland. The town itself was still dry but most residents had evacuated.

At Kimberley, Mark Creek dropped slightly overnight as a result of cooler temperatures. Workers dumped tons of rock to reinforce the concrete ditch which carries the creek through the town, and engineers were watching the situation closely.

At Keremeos, a new dike was hastily thrown up along the Similkameen to replace the old one which was badly undercut by swift-flowing water.

A near-tragedy occurred at Penticton where a nine-year-old girl fell into the swollen Penticton Creek. She was rescued and revived.

SANDBAGS RUSHED

Flood-control officials rushed 100,000 more sandbags from Vancouver to a distribution centre at Nelson, and another shipment of 35,000 was being readied.

Nelson, Trail and Castlegar were reported to have "no major problems" as yet.

The government yesterday issued a special snow-survey bulletin, which said conditions had improved since May 1, and "there is still sufficient time to allow run-off to occur without any widespread flooding."

However, the information was at least five days out-of-date.

Retreating French Fight Delaying Action

With the fall of the jungle fortress of Dien Bien Phu, French Union forces have been compelled to set up new strong points between Viet Minh forces and the kingdom of Laos and its capital, Luang Prabang. One such strong point is being set up here, with infantrymen digging a foxhole trench system. Supplies and food are being parachuted to them. Note parachute descending in rear. Thirty thousand Viet Minh troops are advancing in the Hanoi area.

Air Raid Costly For Reds

OTTAWA (CP)—Defense Minister Claxton said Thursday that nine out of 10 planes of a Russian force attacking North America would be destroyed by continental air defenses.

However, he added in the leadoff of a Commons debate on defense estimates, that percentage of kills was still not good enough, and that "no doubt additional steps will be taken from time to time" to strengthen continental defenses.

Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, VC., Progressive Conservative military critic, said he isn't sure North America has a warning system as effective as Mr. Claxton had indicated.

PITIFULLY SHORT

Canada was pitifully short of fighter squadrons for home defense while it continued to maintain an air division in Europe, he said.

M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, said the defense estimates — about $2,000,000,000 in the current fiscal year—are based on Second World War thinking. Equipment on order would be obsolete before it could be provided.

He suggested that six of the 12 RCAF squadrons in Europe and that at least one battalion of the three-battalion brigade in Korea be brought home.

Mr. Claxton said he doesn't believe there is going to be a general war in the near future. But the basic Soviet aims of imperialism and aggrandizement remained.

PROTECT BASES

The primary aim of continental defense was to protect the West's massive retaliatory weapon, the United States strategic bomber force.

But the existence of nuclear weapons did not preclude conventional weapons. In fact, it made them more necessary to cope with local wars where nuclear weapons could not be employed, he said.

Canada's interceptor force—radar, communications and jet fighters—would be in complete operation by this summer or early autumn, he said, and this defense system had reached the stage where a Russian bomber force attacking U.S. targets might be forced to choose a route other than over the Canadian Arctic.

RADAR OUTPOSTS

The McGill radar fence was being strung across Canada north of the existing radar network, he said, and Canada and the U.S. were considering additional means to give early warning.

British-U.S. Rift Over Asia Widens

LONDON (Reuters)—Differences over Indo-China policy are widening into the most serious breach of recent times between Britain and the United States, diplomatic quarters said Thursday.

Differences of opinion on the need for immediate diplomatic and military intervention in Indo-China have been simmering for the last month, since Britain refused to undertake direct military intervention in Viet Nam shortly before the fall of Dien Bien Phu.

The differences over several issues:

- Whether there should be immediate action to set up a Southeast Asia defense pact, as the U.S. wishes, or whether this should wait until the outcome of the Geneva Far Eastern conference, as Britain wishes.
- Whether projected five-nation staff talks on Southeast Asia's future security from a military point of view should be connected with the proposed Southeast Asia treaty organization. The U.S. wants a link between the two sets of talks. Britain does not.
- The question of actual military intervention in the field, which Britain refused and which is again being discussed directly between France and the United States.

Informed quarters here said that the actual proposal for British military intervention in Indo-China was that Britain should make an air strike in Indo-China to be joined by the United States should this policy get congressional backing.

Good Samaritan Arrives at Last

SEATTLE (UP)—Art Braaten, 48, was in hospital here last night after being found in a vacant lot where he had lain helpless for three days and had been refused aid by passers-by.

Braaten, suffering from severe arthritis, went to sleep in the sun in the lot Sunday. When he awoke, he could not move.

He said he repeatedly cried out for help Sunday night, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, but those who heard him refused him aid. He said a "couple of dozen" persons had passed him by during the three days.

Police were finally summoned last night by R. K. Johnson, Seattle, who heard the calls for help as he drove his car past the lot.

Cowichan Commandos Motley Lot

Loyal Foes Plot Havoc For Reserve Exercise

BY BILL McCARTHY

Nearly a dozen men met behind locked doors in Duncan last night and plotted the "destruction" of a Vancouver Island Canadian army reserve force.

Top brass of the group, which included ex-officers of the German, Polish, British and Canadian armed forces, pored over maps and battle plans.

In the end they were confident they could "wipe out" the 198th Battery of the 66th Light Anti-Aircraft Regiment, defending the crest of Mount Sicker, this week-end.

The men meeting in secret session were members of the Cowichan Commandos — a unique military organization in many ways.

The sole aim of the Commandos is to create havoc within the ranks of local reserve units during military schemes.

In this they have been singularly successful, having defeated various Vancouver Island reserve groups in all four encounters on the field of mock battle.

Led by ex-navy officer James Flynn, of Duncan, the Commandos' originator, the 32 members recruited from navy, army and air forces of several countries — only one of its unique features — the Commandos are in demand among local reserve units to act as the enemy during exercises.

Mr. Flynn says he started the force because he thought the reserve units in "dreadful shape." He attributed this to a lack of realism in mock battles, especially for cadets.

"Pretending trees are men doesn't teach much," he says.

Now organized and sanctioned, but not recognized by the government, the Commandos boast an efficient military system which includes an air force of two planes—owned by members.

With so many officers making up the group, arguments on strategy often proves a greater obstacle than the reserve army.

BROKEN RULES

An example of their unorthodox methods is their use of an ancient (1800's) military manual. They read what the book has to say on a situation and then do the opposite.

"And it usually works," claims Flynn, the good-natured commanding officer.

The Commandos have even pressed their wives into service, to operate radios and maintain headquarters during exercises.

Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, VC honorary colonel of the Commandos, has dubbed the unit "Her Majesty's Loyal Communist Army." But General Pearkes says the group is rendering an invaluable service to the local reserve units.

Using blank ammunition and creeping through the night with blackened faces, the Commandos lend a frightening realism.

On one occasion they crept into a reserve army camp, stole the food supply and let the air out of truck tires before being discovered.

"We also got into their headquarters and swiped a case of beer," chuckles Flynn, adding: "The Commandos need some incentive, too."

This week they will attack the 198th Battery encamped on top of Mount Sicker. That was the reason for the secret meeting in Duncan last night.

They are confident they will "destroy" the 198th, but the methods they will use are "strictly military secrets."

"We have several special secret weapons for this operation," says Flynn.

Sooke Logger Killed

A Sooke logger was killed instantly at 2.30 yesterday afternoon when crushed by a falling tree.

He was Claude Angus Henson, about 30, who was employed by the Elder Timber Products Ltd.

The dead man had been employed by the firm since March, 1952. He was working as a bucker yesterday when the falling tree skewed and crushed him.

Henson had a wife and two small children.

RCMP said an inquest will be held at Hayward's funeral chapel in Victoria at 10 a.m. Tuesday.

Wild Spree Staged in New York

Students Riot in Subway

NEW YORK (AP) — High school boys and girls by the hundreds rioted in the subway Thursday, surging in waves through moving cars and smashing all before them. A porter in their path was beaten.

There was no apparent motive beyond sheer rowdyism.

Twenty-four boys and 19 girls were taken in for questioning by police. First reports had said police rounded up 100 youths.

Most of the students slithered out of the grasp of cops and vanished.

HEAVY DAMAGE

The young vandals smashed windows, ripped apart seats and hurled them from the trains, broke light bulbs and wrecked vending machines. They pulled emergency cords and helped open train doors to disrupt travel schedules.

The riots started after about 1,500 students from four big high schools massed in Van Cortlandt park in The Bronx. Police said they thought the gathering was for a picnic or athletic event.

In the morning, and again in the afternoon, heavy rain sent the students fleeing for shelter to a nearby IRT west side subway station entrance.

Most of the youngsters behaved but several hundred ran wild through trains which are elevated in that section.

A subway porter, Conrad Ingram, 26, ran afoul of the mob and tried to stem the tide of wreckage.

"They beat me up and cursed me," he said afterwards.

Freak Rain Helps Crops

For west Saanich farmers who have no reservoirs to tap, parched crops are still dusty.

But on the East Saanich side of the peninsula there was jubilation yesterday afternoon. A brief but considerable downpour relieved thirsty crops.

The freak rainfall, not unknown in other years, was welcomed by farmers. "Worth $5,000," one fruit grower said.

Crack in Rock Menaces Canal

An engineer examines a deep crack in the rock near the Panama Canal. The split, first discovered in 1938, has become increasingly large until it has assumed a dangerous width. The cracking rock in the hills could fall into the waterway and block transportation. Plans are being mapped to remove the menace.—(Central Press Canadian.)

Casualties Lifted Out of Dien Bien Phu

Evacuation of French Union wounded from Dien Bien Phu is continuing on a small scale, with the French still hoping Vietminh forces will allow enlargement and repair of the shell-pocked airstrip at the fallen fortress so that large transport planes can be used to speed things up. Meanwhile, helicopters like this one and light planes are working under difficulties to carry out the casualties.—(Central Press Canadian.)

Braaten, suffering from severe arthritis, went to sleep in the sun in the lot Sunday. When he awoke, he could not move.

He said he repeatedly cried out for help Sunday night, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, but those who heard him refused him aid. He said a "couple of dozen" persons had passed him by during the three days.

Police were finally summoned last night by R. K. Johnson, Seattle, who heard the calls for help as he drove his car past the lot.

British-U.S. Rift Over Asia Widens

LONDON (Reuters)—Differences over Indo-China policy are widening into the most serious breach of recent times between Britain and the United States, diplomatic quarters said Thursday.

Differences of opinion on the need for immediate diplomatic and military intervention in Indo-China have been simmering for the last month, since Britain refused to undertake direct military intervention in Viet Nam shortly before the fall of Dien Bien Phu.

The differences over several issues:

- Whether there should be immediate action to set up a Southeast Asia defense pact, as the U.S. wishes, or whether this should wait until the outcome of the Geneva Far Eastern conference, as Britain wishes.
- Whether projected five-nation staff talks on Southeast Asia's future security from a military point of view should be connected with the proposed Southeast Asia treaty organization. The U.S. wants a link between the two sets of talks. Britain does not.
- The question of actual military intervention in the field, which Britain refused and which is again being discussed directly between France and the United States.

Informed quarters here said that the actual proposal for British military intervention in Indo-China was that Britain should make an air strike in Indo-China to be joined by the United States should this policy get congressional backing.

Chinese Ready To Talk

GENEVA (AP)—Backstage conversations between East and West Thursday raised some hope that the Communists were ready to talk business on an Indo-China peace.

The Reds were reported willing to proceed today with debate on a military armistice without pressing for recognition at Geneva of "resistance governments" of Laos and Cambodia.

French sources said Red Chinese Premier Chou En-lai made known his position in a private talk with British Foreign Secretary Eden.

Prospect of Rain Increases Threat In B.C. Flooding

The prospect of rain lends new menace to the flood picture in B.C.'s Interior.

Showers and thunderstorms are predicted for today for the entire Interior region.

"If the rain is at all heavy, it will be pretty bad," said Chief Engineer Neil McCallum of the public works department.

Besides adding its own volume to swollen creeks and rivers, rain would wash huge quantities of melting snow down from the mountainsides.

The Kootenay, the Columbia and the Fraser all were rising rapidly, but water levels were still below the danger mark at major centres.

At a dozen points in the Interior, crews were cleaning up after flash floods in small streams cut highways and railroad tracks.

At Mile 91 north of Prince George, the Hart Highway was washed out for 100 feet.

HIGHWAY FLOODED

In the south, near Moyie, traffic on the Southern Trans-Provincial Highway was still splashing through 10 inches of water from the spilling Moyie.

Farther south, Elmer Creek washed away 1,000 feet of roadbed between Curzon Junction and Kingsgate.

CPR gangs had repaired their lines after four washouts.

Near Revelstoke, where the Columbia leaped up two feet in 24 hours, a slide-flood combination knocked out 200 feet of main-line trackage Wednesday. Trains were running again yesterday.

The rail line was also cut in the Nicola Valley, where rising waters reportedly lapped at the outskirts of Merritt.

Between Cranbrook and Yahk the Moyie spilled over the CPR line in four spots.

Near Manning a railway bridge over the Similkameen, knocked out Wednesday, was being replaced by a temporary fill. The river was down three to six inches.

On the 20,000-acre Creston flats, dike patrols kept a round-the-clock watch on the rampaging Kootenay. The river still was four feet below the danger point.

DIKES BURST

Downstream, in Idaho, the Kootenay burst dikes on both sides of Bonner's Ferry and inundated 3,000 acres of farmland. The town itself was still dry but most residents had evacuated.

At Kimberley, Mark Creek dropped slightly overnight as a result of cooler temperatures. Workers dumped tons of rock to reinforce the concrete ditch which carries the creek through the town, and engineers were watching the situation closely.

At Keremeos, a new dike was hastily thrown up along the Similkameen to replace the old one which was badly undercut by swift-flowing water.

A near-tragedy occurred at Penticton where a nine-year-old girl fell into the swollen Penticton Creek. She was rescued and revived.

SANDBAGS RUSHED

Flood-control officials rushed 100,000 more sandbags from Vancouver to a distribution centre at Nelson, and another shipment of 35,000 was being readied.

Nelson, Trail and Castlegar were reported to have "no major problems" as yet.

The government yesterday issued a special snow-survey bulletin, which said conditions had improved since May 1, and "there is still sufficient time to allow run-off to occur without any widespread flooding."

Replaces De Valera

John Costello Irish Premier

DUBLIN (AP) — Silver-haired John A. Costello, Ireland's prime minister from 1948 to 1951, displaced aged, nearly blind Eamon De Valera again Thursday night as the Irish Republic's chief of government.

Voters in Tuesday's general election gave undisputed control of the Dail Parliament to a coalition formed and kept together by Costello, a leading Dublin lawyer.

The final results gave the combined opposition a majority of 16.

The voters rejected a bid by De Valera — only surviving commandant of the 1916 Easter uprising against Britain — to obtain a majority for his Fianna Fail men of destiny party.

Freak Rain Helps Crops

For west Saanich farmers who have no reservoirs to tap, parched crops are still dusty.

But on the East Saanich side of the peninsula there was jubilation yesterday afternoon. A brief but considerable downpour relieved thirsty crops.

The freak rainfall, not unknown in other years, was welcomed by farmers. "Worth $5,000," one fruit grower said.

Sooke Logger Killed

A Sooke logger was killed instantly at 2.30 yesterday afternoon when crushed by a falling tree.

He was Claude Angus Henson, about 30, who was employed by the Elder Timber Products Ltd.

The dead man had been employed by the firm since March, 1952. He was working as a bucker yesterday when the falling tree skewed and crushed him.

Henson had a wife and two small children.

RCMP said an inquest will be held at Hayward's funeral chapel in Victoria at 10 a.m. Tuesday.

Wild Spree Staged in New York

Students Riot in Subway

NEW YORK (AP) — High school boys and girls by the hundreds rioted in the subway Thursday, surging in waves through moving cars and smashing all before them. A porter in their path was beaten.

There was no apparent motive beyond sheer rowdyism.

Twenty-four boys and 19 girls were taken in for questioning by police. First reports had said police rounded up 100 youths.

Most of the students slithered out of the grasp of cops and vanished.

HEAVY DAMAGE

The young vandals smashed windows, ripped apart seats and hurled them from the trains, broke light bulbs and wrecked vending machines. They pulled emergency cords and helped open train doors to disrupt travel schedules.

The riots started after about 1,500 students from four big high schools massed in Van Cortlandt park in The Bronx. Police said they thought the gathering was for a picnic or athletic event.

In the morning, and again in the afternoon, heavy rain sent the students fleeing for shelter to a nearby IRT west side subway station entrance.

Most of the youngsters behaved but several hundred ran wild through trains which are elevated in that section.

A subway porter, Conrad Ingram, 26, ran afoul of the mob and tried to stem the tide of wreckage.

"They beat me up and cursed me," he said afterwards.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

KAREN KADLER, who used to act with the York Theatre here, has made good in Hollywood. They call her a "starlet."

Karen was a piquant brunette, and she looked like herself. Now the hair stylists and the cosmetic engineers have made her into an assembly-line cutie exactly like all the others who emerge from the movie mill.

I saw a picture of her recently, and she resembled 10,000 other mass-produced Hollywood glamour girls.

When she acted here, comparatively few people went to see her. Now thousands of Island moviegoers will pay good money to gape at her image on the screen.

We're funny people here. We won't attend live theatre. But ship the actors and actresses south, process them and send them back in dehydrated form—reduced to celluloid and packed in tin cans—and we stampede the box office.

We Victorians are great admirers of the imported article.

A code of door and sidewalk manners cries out to be written by some social lawgiver.

First of all, such a code should break the deadlock of the Sidewalk Dodgers who meet one another head-on, then dodge to left and right simultaneously like a pair of hootchie-kootchy dancers, except that they wear clothes.

A pair of too-polite individuals can dodge back and forth like this for hours, perfectly synchronized, and never get past one another. The only solution is a rule that specifies which way two sidewalk dodgers are to peel off—just like the department of transport rules about aircraft.

The code might solve the problem of Long-Range Door Holding. Through mistaken chivalry, some men hold a door open when a woman is approaching from distances up to 100 yards. I have seen it happen. I have absent-mindedly done it myself, on occasion.

If the woman has good eyesight, she notices from afar that a man is holding the door open. And she feels a sense of obligation. She mustn't keep him waiting too long. At least, I gather that something of the sort goes through her mind.

Consequently, the poor creature breaks into a run, and arrives at the door with scarcely breath enough to say "Thank you."

It is a strange convention that impels a woman to sprint the length of a city block, perhaps straining her heart, and then thank the person who made her do it.

Here is another case: A man is approaching a door that opens away from him. As he is about to go through it, he sees a woman coming at him from the other side. He holds the door open for her. But because of the way the man and the door are built, she has to duck under his arm to get through, as though negotiating a midget archway.

According to the old book of rules, a man gets off a vehicle first and gives his hand to a lady. But the rules weren't made for buses. If a man gets out of a bus and offers his hand to a strange blonde, she will likely as not administer a stinging slap on the palm with her gloves, and walk on disdainfully.

Sherlock Holmes—Hound of the Baskervilles

BY
SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

(Published by arrangement with the estate of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. World rights reserved. Illustrations copyrighted, 1954, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Sir Henry Baskerville, whose family appears to be fatally haunted by a giant hound, is warned to stay away from the moor where his ancestral home stands, and the same day reports that one of his brand-new boots has vanished. Now he wants the whole story.

"Your request is a very reasonable one," Holmes answered. "Dr. Mortimer, I think you could not do better than to tell your story as you told it to us."

Thus encouraged, our scientific friend drew his papers from his pocket and presented the whole case as he had done upon the morning before. Sir Henry listened with the deepest attention.

"Well, I seem to have come into an inheritance with a vengeance," said he when the long narrative was finished. "Of course, I've heard of the hound ever since I was in the nursery. It's the pet story of the family, though I never thought of taking it seriously before. But as to my uncle's death—well, it all seems boiling up in my head, and I can't get it clear yet. You don't seem quite to have made up your mind whether it's a case for a policeman or a clergyman."

"Precisely."

"And now there's this affair of the letter to me at the hotel. I suppose that fits into its place."

"It seems to show that someone knows more than we do about what goes on upon the moor," said Dr. Mortimer.

"And also," said Holmes, "that someone is not ill-disposed towards you, since they warn you of danger."

"Do you mean danger from this family fiend or do you mean danger from human beings?"

"Well, that is what we have to find out."

"Whichever it is, my answer is fixed. There is no devil in hell, Mr. Holmes, and there is no man upon earth who can prevent me from going to the home of my own people, and you may take that to be my final answer." His dark brows knitted and his face flushed to a dusky red as he spoke. It was evident that the fiery temper of the Baskervilles was not extinct in this their last representative. "Meanwhile," said he, "I have hardly had time to think over all you have told me. I should like to have a quiet hour by myself to make up my mind. It's half-past eleven now and I am going back right away to my hotel. Suppose you and your friend, Dr. Watson, come around and lunch with us at two."

"Is that convenient to you, Watson?"

"Perfectly."

"Then you may expect us. Shall I have a cab called?"

"I'd prefer to walk, for this affair has flurried me rather."

"I'll join you in a walk, with pleasure," said Dr. Mortimer.

We heard the steps of our visitors descend the stair and the bang of the front door. In an instant Holmes had changed from the languid dreamer to the man of action.

"Your hat and boots, Watson, quick! Not a moment to lose!" We hurried together down the stairs and into the street. Dr. Mortimer and Baskerville were still visible about two hundred yards ahead of us in the direction of Oxford Street.

Holmes quickened our pace until we had decreased the distance which divided us by half. Then, still keeping a hundred yards behind, we followed into Oxford Street and so down Regent Street. Once our friends stopped and stared into a shop window, upon which Holmes did the same. An instant afterwards he gave a little cry of satisfaction and, following the direction of his eager eyes, I saw that a hansom cab with a man inside, which had halted on the other side of the street, was now proceeding slowly onward again.

"There's our man, Watson! Come along! We'll have a good look at him, if we can do no more."

At that instant I was aware of a bushy black beard and a pair of piercing eyes turned upon us through the side window of the cab. Instantly the trapdoor at the top flew up, something was told to the driver, and the cab flew madly off down Regent Street. Holmes looked eagerly round for another, but no empty one was in sight. Then he dashed in wild pursuit amid the stream of the traffic, but the start was too great, and already the cab was out of sight.

"There now!" said Holmes bitterly as he emerged panting from the tide of vehicles. "Was there ever such bad luck and such bad management, too? Watson, if you are an honest man you will record this also and set it against my successes!"

"Who was the man?"

"I have not an idea."

"A spy? A shadow?"

"Well, it was evident from what we have heard that Baskerville had been very closely shadowed by someone since he's been in town. How else could it be known so quickly that it was the Northumberland Hotel which he had chosen?"

While diverted by that speeding cab, Dr. Mortimer and the baronet had vanished. "There is no object of our following them now," said Holmes. "The shadow has departed and will not return. We must see what further cards we have in our hands and play them with decision. Could you swear to that man's face within the cab?"

"I could only swear to the beard."

"And so could I — from which I gather that in all probability it was a false one. A clever man upon so delicate an errand has no use for a beard save to conceal his features. Come in here, Watson."

He turned into one of the district messenger offices, where he was warmly greeted by the manager. "Ah, Wilson, I see you have not forgotten the little case in which I had the good fortune to help you?"

"No, sir, indeed I have not. You saved my good name, and perhaps my life."

"My dear fellow, you exaggerate. I have some recollection, Wilson, that you had among your boys a lad named Cartwright who showed some ability during the investigation."

"Yes, sir, he is still with us."

"Could you ring him up?—thank you! And I should be glad to have change of this five-pound note."

A lad of fourteen, with a bright, keen face, had obeyed the summons of the manager. He stood now gazing with great reverence at the famous detective.

"Let me have the Hotel Directory," said Holmes.

"Thank you! Now, Cartwright, there are the names of twenty-three hotels here, all in the immediate neighborhood of Charing Cross. Do you see?"

"Yes, sir."

"You will visit each of these in turn."

"Yes, sir."

"You will begin in each case by giving the outside porter one shilling. Here are 23 shillings."

"Yes, sir."

"You will tell him that you want to see the waste-paper of yesterday. You will say that an important telegram has miscarried and that you are looking for it. You understand?"

"Yes, sir."

"But what you are really looking for is the centre page of the Times with some holes cut in it with scissors. Here is a copy of the Times. It is this page. You could easily recognize it, could you not?"

Yes, sir."

"In each case the outside porter will send for the hall porter, to whom also you will give a shilling. Here are 23 shillings. You will then learn in possibly 20 cases out of 23 that the waste of the day before has been burned or removed. In the three other cases you will be shown a heap of paper and you will look for this page of the Times among it. The odds are enormously against you finding it. There are 10 shillings over in case of emergencies. Let me have a report by wire at Baker Street before evening. And now, Watson, it only remains for us to find out by wire the identity of Cabman, No. 2704, and then we will drop into one of the Bond Street picture galleries and fill in the time until we are due at the hotel."

Canonization Approved

VATICAN CITY (Reuters)—A solemn consistory of 20 cardinals and 100 bishops Thursday approved the canonization of Pope Pius X, the "peasant pope," who died in 1914.

Pope Pius XII, in white silk robes with train and red shoulder cape, presided over the ceremony seated on a raised throne under a red canopy.

The "peasant pope," who died of disappointment at the failure of his attempts to avert the First World War, will be proclaimed a saint at an open-air rite in St. Peter's Square May 29. The last pontiff to be so honored was Pius V (1566-1572). He was canonized in 1712.

The consistory also gave assent to the canonization of five other saints, a French missionary, three Italian priests and an Italian nun. They will be canonized together at ceremonies June 12 and 13.

Garden Notes

Holiday Handy For Odd Tasks

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Isn't it lucky that good Queen Victoria was born on the 24th of May instead of January or December? Here we are with a grand long week end ahead, just at a time when it is needed most to catch up on all those arrears of garden work.

In many gardens this week end, one of the first jobs will be to pull up the spring-flowering plants in the ornamental beds and replace them with summer-flowering bedding-out plants.

If you have had forget-me-nots among your spring bulbs or wallflowers, don't consign them to the compost heap, but loosen the soil a bit under a shrub in some out-of-the-way corner of the garden and throw the pulled-up plants there. The forget-me-not has the happy faculty of ripening and shedding its seed even after the plant has been uprooted, and if you'll look in that spot a little later in the year, you'll find a whole host of forget-me-nots seedlings all ready for transplanting.

CHOPPED UP

When the wallflowers are pulled up, as each one comes out I chop it into two-inch lengths with secateurs or strong scissors, allowing the bits to fall on the beds, but discarding the roots. These chopped-up plant stems are spaded in, and serve three purposes: They add humus to the soil, they keep it open in texture and better aerated, and during the rotting process, they tie up the nitrogen-producing bacteria so that the summer bedding plants will be slightly starved for nitrogen, making them produce more flowers and fewer leaves.

I am a great believer in bone meal as the fertilizing agent to be dug into beds for summer-flowering annuals. It supplies all the elements required for a good floral display without causing lush green growth, and it supplies these elements slowly, and over a long period of time. Moreover, it is a safe fertilizer—it is almost impossible to injure plants with an overdose. That's for me, as I tend to be rather heavy-handed with the fertilizers.

DUAL PURPOSE

Beds which have been ablaze with the color of spring-flowering bulbs always pose something of a problem, as you have to think ahead to next spring's display, while still providing some color in the beds. If you are planting the taller-growing annuals such as snapdragons, zinnias or asters, it is far better to leave the bulbs undisturbed, leaving the foliage to die down naturally. The bedding plants can be arranged in such a fashion as to conceal the unsightly bulb foliage as soon as they have made a little height.

This doesn't work, of course, if dwarf plants are going in the beds as summer replacements, and it becomes necessary to dig up the bulbs and move them to a row in the vegetable garden to finish their growth. A lot of garden books use the term "heeling in" for this operation, which to me conveys a rather careless flinging them in a trench and throwing some dirt on them. This is no good. Transplant your bulbs with all the care you would use for any other plant in full growth.
